Lancaster Farming

Vol. 44 No. 36 | Four Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, July 10, 1999 | $31.00 Per Year | 60¢ Per Copy

Rows of flowers in the field were found on the Aaron F. Stoltzfus dairy farm at the corner of Horseshoe and Creek Hill roads looking north toward Leola in Lancaster County. Flowers and bedding plants have become alternate crops as farmers seek additional enterprises that bring income from retail markets. Of the main crops usually associated with dairy farming, corn made the most change in crop conditions across Pennsylvania this week. In some areas this silage and grain staple was beginning to show the effects of stress due to heat and inadequate soil moisture. But the average height of 28 inches was well ahead of last year and the five-year average. According to the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service, soil moisture was rated 27 percent very short, 51 percent short, and 22 percent adequate. The state's program to encourage voluntary conservation of water is likely to become mandatory within the next few weeks if significant rainfall does not come to the area. Soybeans were nearly all emerged and looked fair to good. Harvesting of barley and wheat advanced well ahead of the five-year average. The high temperatures and humidity were hard on livestock and poultry. Production of milk was down and some chickens died because of overheated houses. Local fire companies watered down poultry houses to lower the temperature in the early part of the week but could not return later because of calls for other emergencies. *Photo by Everett R. Simply Delicious Promotion Has Message For All Pennsylvanians

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — A 1999 promotion campaign for Pennsylvania produce growers and retail marketers was kicked off Wednesday at a Weis Markets store in Lewisburg.

State Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr. was joined by Weis Markets President Norman Rich, Food Merchants Association President David McCorkle, two long-time produce grower-suppliers of Weis, and two local producers, to bring greater attention to the promotional program.

Under the leadership of Secretary Hayes and state Gov. Tom Ridge, the program is designed to broaden awareness of the fact that Pennsylvania producers supply a great deal of the produce marketed through local groceries and supermarket chains, such as Weis Markets.

A campaign slogan, "Pennsylvania Produce: Simply Delicious," was introduced last year to re-energize state and industry efforts to promote an awareness that homegrown produce is not only in local roadside markets, but in major grocery chains, and that Pennsylvania producers are nationally and internationally important.

It could be inferred that the campaign also carries the effect of stimulating pride among Pennsylvania consumers and producers in the fact that the Keystone state does and can produce high quality, healthy and desirable fruits and vegetables.

The program includes cooperative in-store promotions involving more than 900 retail outlets; more than 300 growers; a young billboard campaign currently with 90

Pennsylvania Produce is Simply Delicious, and it deserves to be recognized as such. As part of the 1999 campaign to help educate the public as to the strength and quality of fruit and vegetable production in Pennsylvania, a statewide campaign has been coordinated through the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture with the Pa. Food Merchants, and individual retailers and marketers. Helping to kick off the state campaign in the Lewisburg Weis Market store produce section are, from the left, Food Merchants President David McCorkle, Weis Markets President Norman Rich, state Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr., potato producer Keith Masser, and green bean grower Ronald Copenhaver.

Dairy Of Distinction Announces Winners

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Forty-three Pennsylvania dairy farms selected as 1999 winners of Dairy of Distinction awards have been announced this week.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program is an oversight organization for the Dairy of Distinction Program conducted in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Vermont, and each state conducts its own awards program.

The goal of the Dairy of Distinction Program is to encourage dairy farmers to beautify their farmsteads so as to present production dairying in the best possible light to the road-traveling general public.

The concept is based on a simple human assumption: a good looking operation must make a good product.

An all volunteer program, in Pennsylvania, the state is divided into 10 districts and each district has a committee that receives applications,

The market easily had justification to fall significantly lower, with both beef and pork values in a slump. Western cattle feeders traded 1.00 lower at 63.00 live and 100.00 in the meat, but had yet to trade the bulk of their showlists by Friday morning. Area Holstein steers and slaugh-

National Grain Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Wednesday, July 7, 1999

Wheat bids were slightly higher on slow harvest progress and good overnight export sales. Corn slipped lower due to good crop conditions and some profit taking on the board. Soybean bids gained some ground after yesterday's sharp declines. Wheat 1 to 2 cents higher. Corn 1 cent lower except So. Iowa 3 cents higher. Sorghum 1 to 3 cents lower. Soy- beans 2 to 5 cents higher. Taiwan bought a good amount of US wheat overnight which was supportive to wheat bids, however, sales are still very low compared to a year ago. Wheat harvest still lags behind normal after the recent heavy rainfall in Kansas and Oklahoma. Some good yields have been reported but some yield losses are likely in standing, weathering wheat. Favorable growing weather and good crop ratings are keeping corn bids on the downward slide. Traders made corrections in soybean pits after Tuesday's sharp declines. However, bean crops are looking good and crop ratings are limiting gains.

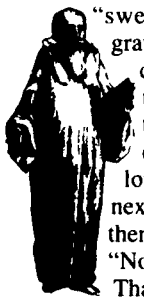
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JULY 12-18, 1999

NEW MOON, JULY 12.

ST. SWITHIN

July 15 is St. Swithin's Day, named for the Bishop of Winchester, who died in A.D. 862. His dying wish was to be buried outside in the churchyard, so that the "sweet rain of heaven" would fall onto his grave. Centuries later, after he was canonized, church authorities thought it more proper to bring him inside. On doing so, a torrential rain commenced and, according to legend, lasted 40 days. Consequently, weatherlore has it that rain today bodes ill for the next 40 days. But if clear skies predominate, then, as Chaucer penned about 600 years ago, "Now welcome somer, with thy sonne soft. That hast this wintres weders overshake."



Lord, this is a huge rayn! This were a weder for to slepen inne!

– Geoffrey Chaucer

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Wash the inside of your windows on rainy days for less trouble with streaks.

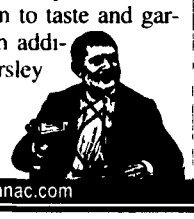
SALMON GADZUKES

4 salmon fillets (about 6 ounces each)
4 tablespoons butter, divided
1/2 pound small zucchini
1/4 cup chopped parsley
salt and pepper, to taste

Rinse salmon fillets, pat dry, and set aside. Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in a skillet. Meanwhile, cut the zucchini into chunks for steaming. Steam until very soft, about 15 minutes. Panfry the salmon in the skillet, searing it on the outside. Keep salmon warm. When zucchini is soft, blend in blender with remaining 2 tablespoons of butter and chopped parsley. Serve salmon on shallow plates, with zucchini puree around it. Season to taste and garnish with additional parsley.

Makes 4 servings.



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

All the tears St. Swithin (July 15) can cry, St. Bartlemy's (August 24) dusty mantel wipes dry.

If mice run about more than usual, expect wet weather.

As July, so the next January.

OPINION

We rarely toot our own horn, even though we receive many complimentary remarks about the scope of our newspaper. But we have been so honored by this piece in the InterView, Penn State University's faculty/staff libraries June/July newsletter, we thought to pass it on to you.

Top Agriculture Newspaper Preserved On Microfilm

The University Libraries are preserving Lancaster Farming, a leading source of Pennsylvania agriculture news, on microfilm. First published in 1955, the newspaper is the largest farm weekly in the United States and reaches 50,000 subscribers in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic regions. Issues printed between 1955 and 1983 will be microfilmed.

Lancaster Farming is a dynamic and vibrant publication, according to Terry Etherton, distinguished professor of animal nutrition and head of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science. "This publication is the voice of agriculture, agricultural policy, and environmental issues related to agriculture," Etherton says.

Helen Smith, life sciences librarian and agriculture sector, says Lancaster Farming, which is aimed at both farmers and their families, is also an important resource for agricultural economics and historians. "It is valuable as a record of Pennsylvania agriculture and country life," she explains, adding that Lancaster Farming is often the only place to get Pennsylvania specific market prices for crops and livestock.

Microfilming Lancaster Farming will allow Libraries' patrons to continue to use the publication while the originals are stored in the Libraries' annex, a climate-controlled area more appropriate for the storage of fragile newspaper.

The project is being funded by the University Libraries, the Thaddeus Stevens Irwin Libraries Preservation Endowment, and the Lancaster Farming publishing office, which provided financial support and is providing copies of any missing issues. The microfilming will be completed by the end of July 1999. For more information on preservation projects, contact Sue Kellerman, head of the preservation department, at (814) 863-4696 or email lsk@psulias.psu.edu. Lancaster Farming's current issue and additional information on the publication are available at http://www.lancasterfarming.com.

According to Libraries officials, Lancaster Farming is the most sought publication in the Penn State University libraries.

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Clean up Pastures after Storms

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, reminds us to beware of summer storms and the threat they pose livestock on pasture Animals standing under trees during a electrical storm are subject to a lightening strike

You may want to take animals off pasture before a thunderstorm Also, it is important to clean up storm damage before it injures or kills livestock. A key item on the clean up list is the removal of downed tree branches, especially if they are from a wild cherry tree.

Wilting cherry leaves will poison livestock when eaten. You should check and repair fences to keep livestock in the pasture and not on roads and other fields. Other dangers to livestock on pasture include things added to the pasture by flooding streams, neighbors or passing motorists. Such items could cut, poison or make livestock sick.

To Clean out Sprayers Correctly

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, you should follow these 8 procedures when cleaning out your spray tank to prevent residue carry over problems.

First, always follow pesticide label for specific cleaning instructions

Second, clean sprayer as soon after use as possible because dried material is harder to remove.

Third, remove any left over spray materials in the tank and booms in an approved manner.

Fourth, fill the tank about half full with water and add a tank cleaning agent (commercial tank cleaner, detergent, bleach, ammonia, etc) as listed on the pesticide label.

Fifth, circulate the solution through the sprayer including the booms and nozzles. Allow the solution to stay in the sprayer for several hours

Sixth, pump the cleaning solution out of the sprayer through the nozzles

Seventh, rinse the tank twice more with clean water

Eighth, remove the strainer, nozzle tips and screens for cleaning

To Look at Fences

For effective animal control, wire spacing is more important than fence height, reports Chester Hughes, Lancaster County Extension Livestock Agent

More animals go through and under fences than over Proper wire spacing makes your fences more effective. Regardless of how many wires your fence has, always position one wire at shoulder height of the animal to be controlled. This is the "nose wire" that your animals see and touch when they approach the fence.

Other fence wires should be spaced according to the type of animal being controlled - 10 to 12 inches apart for cattle and horses or 6 to 8 inches apart for sheep and goats. The bottom wires should be closer together than the top wires

Fences taller than 48 inches are not really necessary. Electric fences may be lower - 36 inches for cattle and horses or 30 inches for sheep and goats. Shorter fences also allow closer wire spacing.

Background Scripture:
Genesis 15:1 through 18:15; 21:1-7
Devotional Reading:
Deuteronomy 7:7-11

God made Abraham and Sarah the best of all possible promises that could be given to a Hebrew: a child to bless their barren marriage and an assurance that they would be father and mother to countless generations. Even today, it would be a magnificent promise, but then it seemed too good to be true. The failure to produce a male heir was one of the most important life issues in Abraham's culture.

We can see just how important it was to him: "O Lord God, what wilt thou give me, for I continue childless, and the heir of my house is Eliezer of Damascus" (Gen. 15:2). We must remember that the only immortality in which people hoped in his day was immortality through the continuance of one's males offsprings. No male children equaled oblivion.

So, we can hardly appreciate how vital was the promise God made: "Your own son shall be your heir...Look toward heaven, and number the stars, if you are able to number them...So shall your descendants be"! (15:4,5). Surely, Abraham had given up hope of ever having and heir and now the Lord was promising him his heart's desire.

THEY LAUGHED!

The writer of Genesis does not tell us how much time passes before this first declaration of God's promise and the second in Genesis 17. When the call first came to Abraham in chapter 12, Abraham was 75 years old. By the time chapter 17 opens, Abraham was 99 years old (17:1). It seems safe to conclude that some time has passed between the original promise and the reiteration of it. So we might assume that, as Abraham grew older, he couldn't help wonder how God's promise would be fulfilled at an age when men do not impregnate and women most certainly do not conceive And if Abraham wondered, you and I would probably have just plain doubted, for we like our promises fulfilled instantly, if not sooner.

Yet, the promise is given once again. First, it is implicit: "...you shall be the father of a multitude of nations..." (17:4). And then explicit: "As for Sarai your wife...I will give you a son by her" (17:15,16). The promise is plain and simple; there is nothing to misinterpret.

So how did Abraham and Sarah react to this incredible promise that had already been long-delayed in fulfillment? "Then Abraham fell on his face and laughed..." Sarah reacted much the same way, a little less openly perhaps: "So Sarah laughed to herself..." (18:12). Well, she thought she laughed to herself, but God heard her and he asks Abraham, "Why did Sarah laugh...?" (18:13). "But Sarah denied, saying, 'I did not laugh'; for she was afraid." She should have known better than try to deceive him. He said, "No, but you did laugh" 18:15).

THEY QUESTIONED

I have to confess that when I read of Abraham and Sarah laughing at God's promise, I grow uneasy for that seems an irreverent response to make to the living God. Yet, as I read this passage again today it occurred to me that God does not seem angry with their laughter. In fact, he seems to understand their reaction and does not mind.

Nor does he seem to mind their qualms. Abraham protests: "Shall a child be born to a man who is a hundred years old? Shall Sarah who is ninety years old, bear a child?" (17:17). Sarah protests, too: "After I have grown old, and my husband is old, shall I have pleasure?" (18:33). Let's not judge them too harshly, for wouldn't we be saying the very same thing? The promises of God sometimes seem funny, because they fly in the face of what we think are "the facts" and we question them because they are beyond what we have previously experienced.

When the Lord makes promises to us that seem beyond all probability, God is not offended if we chuckle and question the seeming absurdity, for he understands our incredulity. Faith does not deny incredulity, but it goes on beyond it. So he meets Abraham and us with a question of his own: "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" (18:14) and how you answer it makes all the difference.

Holstein Foundation Raises $10,000 To Benefit Dairy Youth

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — With leadership from the Holstein Foundation Board of Trustees, $10,400 was raised in contributions and pledges to purchase an animal at the National Holstein Convention Sale in Boise, Idaho on June 21.

Over 40 generous individuals joined together and pledged/contributed a total of $10,400 to the Holstein Foundation to purchase an animal at the sale. Norlis Cleo Mandel was purchased with the pledges and contributions for $10,000 and then resold to Richard Jordan of Idaho for $10,000, with all proceeds going to the Holstein Foundation to support a new program, Dairy Knowledge Jeopardy Contest.

Dairy Knowledge Jeopardy Contest is being developed to provide programming for dairy youth ages 9 - 13, broadening the age population served by Holstein Foundation programs. The program format will be modeled after the popular television program, Jeopardy. Furthermore, dairy youth can compete as individuals from states where they may not have a large enough population to field a dairy bowl team. The program will enable youth to begin at an early age to hone and develop their dairy knowledge through study and preparation for the contest. Dairy Knowledge Jeopardy will also serve as good preparation for those dairy youth who go on to participate on dairy bowl teams. The Dairy Knowledge Jeopardy program will provide opportunities for dairy youth to learn life skills such as critical thinking, decision-making, problem solving and communications. Plans are being developed to launch the program at the All-breeds convention in Madison, Wisconsin scheduled for March 2000.

The Mandel daughter purchased in the sale by the Holstein Foundation was owned by Amy Hagenow of Reedsville, Wisconsin. The dry Junior Three-Year-Old had a very successful show season last year, being first Junior at World Dairy Expo along with first place Junior Two-Year-Old at the Grand National Junior Holstein Show. She went on to be named the Reserve Junior All-American Junior Two-Year-Old. Hagenow has been heavily involved in dairy youth programs, both in the state of Wisconsin and on the National Level, where she was recently named a Distinguished Junior Member. She is currently serving in a summer internship position with the Holstein Foundation headquartered in Brattleboro, Vermont with an emphasis on youth and communications programs.

Cornell Wine, Brew Lab Benefits From Gala Dinner

GENEVA, N.Y. — The Gala Dinner and Wine Country Auction conducted early March to benefit the Cornell Vinification and Brewing Technology Laboratory under construction at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y. was a success.

"The event went far better than we expected," said FS&T chairman Mark McLellan. "Over $14,000 was raised after expenses and everybody had a good time."

Many Geneva staff and faculty were in attendance, as were central New York winemakers, brewmasters, business people, politicians, and Geneva notables. "The representation was broader than last year, and even though we had fewer attendees than last year, we raised more cash from the auction," said McLellan.

The 120 attendees paid $100 a plate and were treated to a sumptuous black tie affair and wine country auction at the Geneva Lakefront Ramada. Daryl B Lund, Ronald P. Lynch, Dean of the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, served as master of ceremonies.

The was the second annual event. So far, more than $150,000 of state funds have been earmarked for the project, and $70,000 in donations from the industry. The 2,000 square foot pilot plant is being designed and specially equipped for enology and brewing studies. To date, the lab has been emptied, cleaned, and painted Flooring and drainage is being installed and footers were poured for an outside delivery ramp and platform as the former machine shop is being expanded west of the FS&T building.

DFA Spurs Industry Support of Dairy Relief Inc., Global Hunger Relief

Today's preoccupation with producing more milk, developing new dairy products and making the bottom line work, sometimes causes us to lose sight of real needs. In February, Dairy Relief Inc. (DRI), a nonprofit organization, was formed to help alleviate world hunger by providing dairy products for humanitarian aid.

With its first major grant of $50,000 from Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) and additional support from other dairy and agricultural organizations, DRI immediately began fulfilling its mission of relief here and abroad. Its efforts included:

- Establishing a grant to the Mennonite Central Committee of Akron, Pa., for delivery of nearly 7,500 pounds of nonfat milk powder to schools on the strife-torn West Bank of Palestine;
- Delivering approximately 20,000 pounds of buttermilk powder to Global Bridges, a Texas-based charity, for shipment to needy North Koreans for bread roll production;
- Shipping more than 39,900 pounds of nonfat dry milk to Honduran hurricane victims. (This DRI donation was made possible with the assistance of the David Livingstone/K.U.R.E. Foundation)

"We've received contributions from many sources," says Tom Townsend, a retired dairy industry executive who serves as DRI vice president and chief executive officer. "Those contributions, along with matching funds from Dairy Farmers of America, have made it possible for DRI to make product purchases and work with other humanitarian organizations to put dairy products where they are needed most."

To date, DFA has matched more than $100,000 in contributions and DRI has generated more than $260,000 for humanitarian relief.

In coming months, DRI will focus on two fronts. "We'll be assembling additional shipments of dairy products and, at the same time, we will be actively seeking new donations," Townsend says. "We plan to reach and exceed our initial fund-raising goals in order to purchase and ship dairy products to hungry and undernourished people around the world. We hope this is only the beginning."

For more information about DRI or to make a tax-deductible contribution, contact Dairy Relief Inc., P.O. Box 1837, Springfield, MO 65801-1837, or talk to your local DFA representative.

TOBACCO BLUE MOLD

CONTROL IT WITH

ACROBAT®

MZ FUNGICIDE

DIRECTIONS FOR USE IN FIELD GROWN TOBACCO

Directed Foliar Applications

Application Rates and Timing Chart To Control Blue Mold

Weeks Of Growth After Transplant	Rate Of ACROBAT MZ (Pounds of Product)	Water Output (Gallons/Acre)
Recently Transplanted to 3 weeks after transplanting	0.50	20
3-4 weeks after transplanting (Knee High)	1.0	40
4-5 weeks after transplanting (Waist High)	1.5	60

Note Above directions are for dilute sprays. If concentrate sprays are used, adjust rate and volumes proportionately, e g for mist blowers, use a 2X concentrate and 1/2 the spray volume

Begin applications when the Blue Mold Advisory states that conditions favor development of blue mold, and before the onset of disease infection. Continue applications on a 5-7 day spray schedule until weather conditions favoring infection and sporulation decrease. Discontinue sprays when and if the threat of blue mold subsides.

ACROBAT MZ can only be used in a preventative spray program to manage blue mold in tobacco. Total plant coverage is essential to achieve maximum disease control with ACROBAT MZ. ACROBAT MZ must be used in accordance with the label.

Penn State Expert To Explain F

ERIE (Erie Co.) — United States dairy farmers in August are to vote upon proposed changes to the federal milk marketing order system, and 26 educational programs are being offered throughout Pennsylvania beginning July 12 to help farmers make an educated vote.

According to several news releases sent out concerning the scheduled meeting series, Dr. Ken Bailey, Penn State University marketing and policy analyst, is to be the main speaker during the programs.

The meetings begin in Erie and Crawford counties on July 12, and according to George Wilcox, Penn State Extension dairy specialist for Erie County, the program is the same for all scheduled meetings.

These meetings should be considered very important.

There has been so much across-the-board change in the foundations of the dairy industry, as well as many other distratcting issues on the plate for dairy farmers, that some consider that farmers may not be adequately prepared to make a knowledgeable decision when asked to vote in August on the federal milk marketing order reform and change in federal dairy policy.

Under the 1996 Farm Bill, the U.S. secretary of agriculture was directed to reform the federal milk marketing system.

The legislation outlined specific parameters for a new system, but left the details of creating a fair and working system to the USDA.

Since 1996, there have been several federal efforts to ascertain dairy industry desires for a new program.

But consensus had not been discovered, although with the merging of regional dairy cooperatives in national cooperatives, a greater sense of consensus is being promoted.

In the meantime, the USDA came up with several proposals and none has been found to have wide appeal.

The current policy and proposal upon which votes are to be taken in August, would reduce the number of federal milk marketing orders, revise borders, change the formulations for calculating milk and milk component values, and farmers' pay.

In general, while USDA has promoted the final proposal as fair and equitable, it has been rejected by certain factions because it is

Day Brothers Are First Sibling DJM Finalists

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — For the first time in the history of the Holstein USA breed organization, a pair of brothers are simultaneously winners of the organization's Distinguished Junior Member Award.

David and Matthew Day, sons of Curtis and Ann Day of Tri-Day Holsteins in rural Shippensburg, both were named winners and received the national honor at the Holstein USA convention, held recently in Boise Idaho.

The brothers were featured in Lancaster Farming just prior to the convention when it became apparent that, for the first time, two brothers had been selected as semi-finalists. They said at the time that winning this competition would be the "crown jewel" of Holstein achievements for them.

Both are Cornell University animal science students, and have been members of national champion dairy judging teams.

There were 12 semi-finalists considered for finalists. Six were selected as finalists.

Other winners include Kristin Myers, of New Windsor, Maryland; Julie Kelsey, of Canastota, New York; Amy Hagenow, of Reedsville, Wisconsin; and Matthew Dorshorst, of Junction City, Wisconsin.

For the national competition, the 12 semi-finalists submitted a detailed compilation of their junior activities and are interviewed by a panel of judges in the final selection process.

The 12 semi-finalists each received $300 scholarships. The six finalists were awarded a renewed annula membership, and commemorative pins.

For more information about the Distinguished Junior Member Program, call Kelli Dunklee, program specialist, (800) 952-5200, extension 2124.

'ederal Milk Order, Policy Reform

projected to result in a loss of income for Eastern states dairy producers, while it increases farmer pay in the Middle Western states.

Because of the complexity of the proposal, and recent publicity campaigns to sway individual farmers against the proposal, the series of meetings should be well attended.

According to the news release from Wilcox, prior to working at Penn State, Dr. Bailey worked for eight years as an Extension associate professor with the University of Missouri's Commercial Agriculture program.

Bailey also has had articles widely published, and he contributes writings to a feed and nutrition publication, as well as maintaining his own internet website that provides his outlook on the dairy industry.

In his news release, Wilcox stated that all 26 meetings are to follow the same agenda.

At each meeting, the first issue to be discussed is to be federal order reform, with two speakers — Bailey and the administrator (or his representative) of the appropriate milk marketing administrator office (Federal Order 2, 4, or 36) for the region in which the meeting is held.

Bailey is to be the first speaker, and his presentation is to be, "What the Changes Mean to Your Milk Check."

The federal milk market administrator is to discuss, "The Market Administrator's View."

A local Penn State Extension dairy or farm management agent is to next talk about the role of the Pennsylania Milk Marketing Board and compacts in marketing Pennsylvania milk.

Dr. Bailey is then to wrap up the meeting with a presentation on "Price Projections and Outlook."

For each meeting, a local agent or industry person is serving as contact person.

For more information, especially for meeting locations described only as a farm name, call the Extension office in the county in which the meeting is scheduled to be held.

There is no charge to attend the meetings.

High School Sophomores Again Take Home Team Ribbon At Meats Judging Contest

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — On Wednesday, 4-H'ers from two counties listened to simple advice that could help them when they compete at this year's state contests.

When judging meats, according to Penn State's meat specialist, keep in mind three things: muscling, trimness, and quality.

"Those are the three things you have to worry about," said Dr. Bill Henning, Penn State Extension meat specialist, during the Southeast 4-H Pennsylvania Meats Judging Contest at Stoltzfus Meats, Intercourse.

Henning provided some judging tips on fresh hams, a little harder to quantify compared to what they're used to, the carcass.

In the end, the Lancaster meats judging team again took home the championship ribbon at the contest. High individual was Derick Bollinger, also from the winning team.

About 11 4-H'ers, including six from York and five from Lancaster, competed in the prelude event to 4-H Achievement Days, scheduled July 27-29 at Penn State.

Wednesday's practice contest, according to Chet Hughes, Lancaster livestock agent, "gives kids a feel for how the contest runs and what to expect at State Days," he said. The contest is more structured and demanding of their knowledge and skills than a simple practice session.

A strong focus of the contest, Hughes noted, was the retail cuts identification portion of several species, including beef, pork, and lamb. The cuts included wholesale, retail, and type of cut (steak, chop, or slice).

There were 35 cuts, worth 10 points each, for a total of 350 as best score in the retail cuts portion. There were three lamb cuts in the contest.

In the judging portion, there were several classes, including beef carcass, pork carcass, and fresh hams.

For beef cuts, the emphasis is on muscling, trimness, and quality. For pork, muscling and trimness and leanness were emphasized.

Step by step, Henning, meats specialist, provided extensive reasons on how and why he placed the four types of fresh hams.

The one ranked last looked pale, two-toned, watery, with low meat quality, Henning noted. The one at the top was the beefiest, in a way, with the largest center section, plumpest center cushion, and highest lean-to-fat ratio of any of them. It was more uniform in muscling, trimmest over collar, with less seam fat, and boasted a wider center section.

The fresh ham would easily qualify as the hardest class, because some of the contestants, Henning noted, don't realize the value of lean to fat, because many don't purchase meats for the household. One of the easier classes, however, is the pork carcass, because they resemble the live counterparts, where it is relatively easy to determine fat and muscling in the show ring.

The first place meats judging team is comprised of Radell Peters, 16, Elizabethtown; Jimmy Zimmerman, 15, Reinholds; Ryan Donough, 15, Manheim; and Derick Bollinger, 15, Manheim. All are high school sophomores.

Team coach was Jeff Craig, Little Britain, Stoltzfus meat technician, who has coached the team three years in a row. Craig has coached meats judging teams for about seven years. The team also won first last year, the second time Stoltzfus Meats hosted the contest.

If the Lancaster team places first during State 4-H Achievement Days, they will advance to national competition at the American Royal National 4-H Meats Judging Contest at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kan. the first week of November.

Winning high individual, beating team co-member Radell Peters by one point, at 516 points overall was Derick Bollinger.

Derick is the son of Eugene and Carol Bollinger, Manheim.

Bollinger, a sophomore at Manheim Central High School, said he bested Peters because his meats judging, especially in beef carcass and fresh hams scores, were better. Practice at livestock judging, mostly hogs and sheep at major county fairs, also helped. Derick said that he also judges livestock for FFA and 4- H and competed this week at the livestock judging contest at Lebanon Fairgrounds.

Derick will be showing hogs and sheep at various upcoming fairs, including 4-H roundup, Elizabethtown, Ephrata, New Holland, and Manheim, and the state Farm Show.

Another team member, Radell Peters, is the son of Raymond and Becky Peters, Elizabethtown, a sophomore at Elizabethtown High School.

Team member Jimmy Zimmerman, 15, is the son of Jay and JoAnn Zimmerman, Reinholds. Zimmerman is a sophomore at Ephrata High School.

Ryan Donough, team member, 15, is the son of Ed and LaRue Donough, Manheim. Ryan is also a sophomore, at Manheim Central High School.

According to Bollinger, there were a total of six team practices before the contest. The team will meet mid-week next week for another practice session before going on to state competition.

Following is a list of show placings.

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

No Hay For Calf's First Six Weeks

GEORGE F. W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

Calf feeding on dairy farms has often been the stepchild, delegated to younger employees or children of the family. As a result, the health and growth of calves was not what it should be according to what we know from research about the potential metabolic development of calves. With the advent of calf hutches and computerized nursing and feeding of calves, the situation improved considerably, especially when measured in terms of the greatly decreased mortality of calves.

Still, even under these two new systems, calves are left to their own choices of what to eat and how much. This is because, typically, hay and calf-starter concentrates are offered freely in addition to the feeding of milk in buckets, bottles or from a computer directed nursing machine nipples.

Calves are born monogastrics, just as humans, horses, rabbits and pigs are, meaning that only one stomach is developed. In calves this is called abomasum. The other three typical ruminant stomachs—rumen, reticulum and omasum—found in growing and adult cattle, goats, sheep, deer and buffaloes—are not yet developed in newborn calves. Actually, during pregnancy some development in the rumen does occur, but it regresses again and becomes rudimentary at the time of birth.

As far as I know, no research has been done to try to understand this process of regression in utero nor how to prevent it, so that a newborn calf would have the immediate ability to digest hay and grain. Wouldn't that be a great start for our dairy calves? The exception, of course, is the veal calf that is fed neither hay nor grain.

The development of the rumen in calves after birth is a fascinating physiological process. It can almost be prevented, or at least greatly delayed, when a calf is fed only milk, even beyond the normal 6 to 8 weeks of nursing when weaning is postponed. Research has shown (and this was part of my studies at the University of Wisconsin in the 1960s and later at the University of Delaware) that the development of the rumen occurs in two phases: (1) increase in volume and (2) increase in weight, because of (a) growth of muscular tissue, (b) growth of rumen mucosa and (c) growth of rumen papillae with supporting tissues

These developmental phases occur in response to (1) mechanical and (2) chemical stimuli from the daily feed intake by calves. In other words, the rumen develops only in response to feed, to its physical properties and nutritional constituents More specifically, rumen development into a functional organ includes eight factors: (1) the beginning of ruminating, (2) the motility of the developing rumen, (3) the flora and fauna is beginning to become established and is digesting feeds, (4) the rumen mucosa and papillae are starting to absorb nutrients, (5) the rumen mucosa is beginning to metabolize nutrients into new components, (6) voluntary feed intake by the calf is stimulated, (7) blood circulation is increased, and (8) enzymes for the digestion of carbohydrates and proteins, non-existent at birth, are activated

At birth, the rumen and reticulum of a calf, non-functional as they are, together weigh about 38 percent, the non-functional omasum 13 percent and the abomasum, the functional true stomach, analogues to the monogastric stomach, 49 percent of the total 4-stomach organ mass This situation is about the same in goats, sheep and other ruminants. At 4 weeks of age, the different organ weights are 52, 12, and 36 percent, indicating normally developing ruminant stomachs; at 8 weeks, they are 60, 13, and 27 percent; and at 9 months, 64, 25, and 11 percent, according to the extensive research at Cornell University

Ruminating begins to develop slowly after birth During the first two weeks, a calf on milk ruminates only about 3 times 15 minutes each at most By 4 weeks of age the calf eating grain and hay in addition to getting milk is ruminating about 9 periods per day of 20 minutes each; and by the time of weaning, it totals 5 hours per day

Parallel to this is the development of a functional rumen In response to mechanical stimuli—hay, even wood shavings, plastic or sponges—the size of the rumen increases In now classic research at Cornell University, hay-fed calves developed bigger rumens, but grain-fed calves had longer rumen

DOPP Signup Success Indicates Program Needs Adjustments

SANDY BRADLEY
Mercer Co. Correspondent

GROVE CITY (Mercer Co.) — In January, more than 400 farmers, nearly a quarter of them from Pennsylvania, enrolled in the USDA-subsidized program called the Dairy Options Pilot Program (DOPP).

The program is being operated by USDA's Risk Management Agency (RMA) in an effort to help milk producers learn about, and trade in, milk futures contracts as a way to compensate for financial losses from fluctuating milk prices.

The program was offered in 42 counties in seven states, which included California, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, Texas, Vermont, and Wisconsin.

The states were primarily selected due to their high level of dairy production.

To qualify, farmers had to produce 100,000 pounds of milk over a sixth-month period — a quantity that can be achieved with a 20- to 30-cow herd.

The premise of DOPP was that, after enrollees attended mandatory 4-hour training programs, they selected qualified brokers from a list distributed by the RMA and "hedged," or purchased put options, in designated amounts for designated months throughout the duration of round one of the program.

Participants could purchase a single "put" option or could distribute their investment dollars over a period of several months.

Since the first round of DOPP occupied a 6- to 8-month timeframe, many of the contracts are still active — the last of them due to expire in October.

Producers could only hedge for the amount of milk they actually produce on the farm, with maximum totals of 600,000 pounds. The USDA subsidized 80-percent of the option premiums.

Although DOPP had a goal to include as many as 100 farmers from each participating county, the actual enrollment fell short of that, said USDA'
RMA Education Director Craig Witt.

It is possible that enrollment was lower than expected because of the participation rules. They stipulated that farmers sign an enrollment contract before attending the training and educational sessions.

Many producers, Witt said, probably didn't want to commit to a program they knew little about.

Although the second round of DOPP will essentially be a repeat of the first, RMA is considering implementing a few changes — including doing away with signing a participation contract before attending an educational session.

The second round will include as many as 30 states and will be implemented in stages, about five states at a time, over a one-year period.

Although Pennsylvania and the other states included in round one of DOPP will be included in round two of the program, individual participants will not be eligible for subsidies a second time.

According to Witt RMA hopes to announce the second round of DOPP in the near future, though it is still evaluating modifications that will ultimately affect the program in general.

In addition to eliminating the up-front contract, RMA is anticipating industry changes to the federal milk marketing order system and dairy policy announced by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

How the changes ultimately affect the basic formula price for milk, and how futures are traded is unclear, Witt said.

Other, internal changes to the program might include expanding the window of time in which participants can hedge.

Round one of the program limited farmers in this way, he said, and because of this participants weren't able to hedge during subsequent months when prices were most volatile.

Something that will influence Pennsylvania's participation in the second round of DOPP, said Witt, is possible expansion of the Northeast Dairy Compact and reauthorization by U.S. Congress. Pennsylvania would then be in the Compact.

Like the DOPP, the compact was designed to provide farmers with some control over price floors set for the milk they sell.

In round one, Vermont, which also belonged to the dairy compact, was among the lower enrollment statistics in DOPP.

But many Vermont producers, he added, seemed to see benefits in adding DOPP as another layer of risk insurance.

Witt said that Pennsylvania's turnout of 90 participants — nearly 50 of them from Crawford County — was probably due to Penn State's mini-DOPP educational program in which a group of farmers and extension agents received information about the project, with the idea that they would spread the word and inform their colleagues.

Extension agents played a key role in the program's success, he added, and those most supportive of the program seemed to garner strong participation in their regions.

Biotechnology in the Barnyard

Terry D. Etherton
Department Head

With the world population expected to double in the next 40 years, it has become increasingly evident that biotechnological developments in a variety of scientific and engineering disciplines will be crucial.

It has been estimated that the supply of food required to adequately meet human nutritional needs over the next 40 years is quantitatively equal to the amount of food previously produced throughout the entire history of humankind! This poses a daunting challenge for several reasons.

First, virtually all land suitable for farming world-wide is being farmed. Secondly, destruction of tropical rainforest - or wildlife habitat is not a viable option for environmental considerations. The only feasible solution is to develop new biotechnologies that enhance food production efficiency, either providing an increase in the quantity of milk produced per unit of feed consumed or, in the case of meat animals, an increase in lean tissue (muscle) gain per unit of feed consumed.

To develop these technologies requires an investment in "discovery research." Discovery research, as the phrase implies, is the process of discovering new findings that may lead to the development of an innovative product or service. Universities, such as The Pennsylvania State University, and private sector companies conduct a large amount of discovery research.

The process is exceedingly formidable! A lot of good ideas are not practical, and the investment in the process is sizeable. One of the essential elements of early discovery research is to determine a concept's efficiency - does it work, how well does it work? After establishing the effectiveness, great effort is spent to develop the discovery into a product that can be used on the farm.

A great deal of work is done to test safety (both animal and human), to evaluate environmental issues and to develop least cost production systems. It is not uncommon for a company developing a product to spend over $100 million on the discovery and development phases! This expenditure does not include capital costs that may be necessary to build the facilities to produce large quantities of the new compound.

The time from discovery to release of a biotechnological product can take as long as 10 to 15 years! Much of this time is devoted to seeking and gaining regulatory approval from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). The FDA has oversight for evaluating all animal biotechnologies to assure that they are: 1) effective; 2) do not pose any increased risk to the animal and 3) that consumption of meat and milk from animals treated with a novel biotechnology product is safe for consumers. The FDA takes their mandate very seriously. We are fortunate to live in a country that has the best regulatory agency in the world for evaluating new animal biotechnologies, to ensure their safety.

There are important ramifications associated with the cost of developing a biotechnology product for commercial application at the farm. It is a long term process! We simply cannot wait until problems arise with the food supply in the future and expect a "quick fix." Given the expanding world population the question is not is there going to be a problem with food availability but when the problem will begin.

A sensible solution is to make the necessary investment today and continue our discovery and development of novel biotechnologies that will improve food production efficiency. Based on past progress, many animal and food scientists believe that we can adequately feed the world in the future, provided we continue to invest in research.

Farm And Home Field Day Aug. 11

NEWARK, Del. — Take a day to enjoy summertime in the country at the University of Delaware's Farm and Home Field Day, Wednesday, Aug. 11, from 8:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. at the Research and Education Center in Georgetown.

The annual event offers many fun-filled, educational activities, tours, interactive exhibits and demonstrations for homeowners and farmers alike.

Field tours by wagon will highlight agronomic and vegetable crops. Farmers can consult with extension specialists about the latest research on watermelon varieties, weed and pest controls, fetility, as well as strategies for integrated pest control.

Visitors to Farm and Home Field Day can drop by the Sussex Master Gardeners demonstration garden to view a wide array of plantings. What began as a yearly one-day display has blossomed into a large permanent exhibit for plants, including herbs, shade-loving plants, annual flowers, perennial ground covers, decorative grasses, roses and asters.

Local 4-H clubs will set up a petting zoo and food booths. Consumer, environmental, and commodity groups will staff informational booths in the Grove. Carriage and pony rides will round out the morning's activity.

Farm and Home Field Day is free and open to the public. Tickets for a traditional fried chicken lunch at noon can be purchased at the registration table.

Farm Bureau Files Amicus Curiae In Exit 7 Law Suit

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau has taken legal action in a court battle involving Pennsylvania's agricultural protection and preservation programs and priorities.

Farm Bureau is filing a "friend of the court" legal brief opposing efforts by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation to avoid seeking prior approval before taking farmland in an agricultural security area for a new interstate highway interchange.

Farm Bureau is filing the amicus curiae brief in Commonwealth Court on behalf of Farm Bureau members Lamar and Lois White of Greene Township, Franklin County. The couple went to court to stop PennDOT from doing survey and design work on their farm in preparation for the planned construction of Exit 7 on Interstate 81 near Chambersburg. In order to complete the project, PennDOT will need to condemn all or a large portion of the 26-acre White farm that is included in agricultural security areas in Greene and Guilford townships.

Under provisions first enacted in 1981 enabling townships in Pennsylvania to establish agricultural security areas for the purposes of farmland protection, state agencies must submit condemnation proposals involving agricultural security areas to the Agricultural Lands Condemnation Approval Board (ALCAB) for review. The Board has 60 days to determine if there is a feasible and prudent alternative to the condemnation of the protected farmland. The Whites contend that since PennDOT has not submitted its plans to ALCAB, it does not have the power to condemn and therefore has no right to enter their property.

Commonwealth Court issued a preliminary injunction in May at the farm couple's request. A hearing has been scheduled for July 21 to consider PennDOT's preliminary objections to the injunction. Farm Bureau's legal brief takes issue with the "existing highway" exception argument raised by PennDOT in its preliminary objections.

Farm Bureau contends that the exception to ALCAB review contained in the 1979 law which established the Board is intended to be strictly applied only to highway projects such as road widening, the elimination of curves, or reconstruction of an existing road. These activities are specifically spelled out in the "existing highway" exceptions section of the law.

Farm Bureau points out that the Exit 7 project would create a new interchange and a new access point to Interstate 81. In addition, it would substantially relocate three existing roads near the proposed interchange — Walker Road, Kohler Road and Franklin Farm Lane. Walker Road would see major change with the elimination of a bridge overpass between farmland on the east and west sides of I-81. A new thoroughfare would be located nearly a mile south of the present overpass. The relocation of roads is not included in the "existing highway" exceptions, Farm Bureau noted.

In view of the Agricultural Security Area Law's "broad and clearly expressed public policy objectives to enhance and protect the economic integrity of agricultural security areas and encourage and enhance the agricultural development of farming operations in agricultural security areas," the Court must take a strict view of the "existing highway" exception, Farm Bureau argued.

"PennDOT's refusal to seek ALCAB review represents a major attack on the integrity of the ag security area process," said John Bell, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Governmental Affairs Counsel, who submitted the amicus curiae brief. "PennDOT cannot disregard its legal responsibility."

Nearly 32,000 farms across the state are enrolled in 820 separate ag security areas. Farms in an ag security area are protected against unreasonable restrictions from local ordinances and receive an extra level of review in eminent domain condemnation proceedings.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a non-governmental, voluntary organization which represents over 27,000 farm and rural families.

QUESTION: What would be an effective choice for stall bedding in our new freestall facility?

ANSWER: Giving a direct answer to this question would make some people happy and others very mad.

I really do not think there is an answer that will fit all situations.

Cow comfort, cost, availability, disease control, and handling are all issues that must be addressed before the "right" choice is made.

To complicate the issue even further, dairymen have had success with just about every choice of bedding material. What one will condemn, others will tout as the best.

There is one common link that can help us determine if our choice has been or will continue to be the correct one for us. That link is cow language and our ability to decipher it.

I recently visited two different farms and came across a similar type of problem. Let's talk about the two and see the common link that both share.

The first farm milks near 200 cows in a freestall facility, and two different stall bases are used.

A post-fresh group lies on rubber filled mattresses that are bedded with sand.

The rest of the herd rests in stalls with asphalt in the bottom, covered with generous portions of sand.

Going from sawdust to sand a couple of years ago was viewed as the right decision because of reduced somatic cell counts with their Pa.DHIA records.

They also experience less coliform initiated mastitis cases.

Cow comfort was reported to be at a very high level and no one has second-guessed the decision to move to sand bedding.

Upon my arrival, we proceeded to the barn to view the cows and I saw something that made me look at the cows' feet and legs. The sand was very white and coarse in appearance.

I thought that I was sure to see damage at the hock area, but it was just the contrary. The hocks were probably the best that I have encountered in a free stall barn.

What I did see was bald front knees.

Yes, bald. Apparently due to the sand grinding off the hair when the cows got up.

As we walked further, a cow was laying in the alley and the dairyman said that rarely occurred. I bent down to see that her knees were red, sore, and hot in the bald area when I touched her.

I also saw some cows laying with front knees extended and the same abrasive appearance.

We talked and apparently the sand supplier had changed sand for use at this farm a short time ago. We needed to change this sand back to a finer grade, before we had some major problems with these cows.

The second farm I had in mind was on my schedule the next day.

I had been at this dairy a month ago to help celebrate the building of a new facility with an open house.

During that time, something was brought to my attention — stall acceptance for standing was great, but only a small percentage of the cows would lie down.

Unlike the other farm, the hock area was showing a lot of damage.

When I returned to work with the dairyman a month later, the damage had spread to the front knee.

The barn was built with rubber mats on top of a concrete cow bed. The thought was to use sparing amounts of sawdust to keep the cows clean.

This thought is quickly turning into a disaster with many cows struggling to get up due to soreness in their legs. Some have gone to lying on the crossover alleys as the automatic alley scrapers stop them from lying in the freestall alleys.

The problem here is similar to the first farm, except that culprit here is the shallow sawdust that the cows lay on.

When looking at sawdust from a circular saw, we see that the dust is in small chips that act like an abrasive compound when a thin layer covers the rubber mats.

Changing to a finer dust from a band mill or to shavings is one alternative. This will probably not be the answer, because the stall design is for easy cleaning and not for bedding retention.

Using a bedding saver at the end of the stall to allow for a thick cushion of sawdust should help.

The point of these two stories is to show that each farm made stall improvements in the eye of the dairyman.

We do need to go to the cows, to see if our ideas are correct.

What is most important is that new facilities and new management practices meet the approval of the cows.

It is too bad that some quantitative measure, like our DHIA records, cannot tell us these kinds of things. Sometimes we really have to go all the way back to basics and ask the cows.

Fuls Shows Somerset Beef Jackpot Grand Champion

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — "I thought it was a good show," Annette Knotts commented following the Somerset County Jackpot Show at the Somerset County fairgrounds on June 20.

Knotts was a committee chairperson for the jackpot show

"Everything went smooth and I had plenty of volunteers," she added.

Even the animals seemed to appreciate the rather cool temperatures on Father's Day, mere hours before the official arrival of summer on Monday They were all well behaved

Justin Fuls' steer, the Division II winner that was shown in Class 6 was named the grand champion steer

The Berks County teenager from Richland attends the Conrad Weiser High School where football also occupies a large part of his time.

Fuls said he bought the steer from Sunrise Club Calves in Shippenville, Clarion County and answered questions about the care he gives his steer

"We work on them everyday, morning and night," reported the 16-year-old. "We rinse them a little bit and walk them around to give them exercise," he said, adding, "It calms them down a lot."

Wes Marshall had the resere champion steer, a Maine Cross that won Division I and was shown in Class 3

It was Marshall's first time showing at the Somerset affair after driving a considerable distance from Weyers Cave, Virginia He is 18

Sara Campbell, Sycamore, Greene County had the grand champion heifer which was also the premier animal Heather Fuls, Berks County, had the reserve champion heifer

Shawn Troutman, Hyndman was the Somerset County exhibitor grand champion and also had the Somerset County Club Calf Sale grand champion. The young man is 13 and next fall will enter the eighth grade in the Meyersdale Area School District.

Dan Miller, 16, Meyersdale was the county exhibitor reserve champion. He will be a senior at the Meyersdale Area High School.

Judge Chad Stine, Wooster, Ohio, over the course of the day surveyed some 67 steers and 24 heifers.

The committee had earlier decided to bump the starting time ahead by one hour and were satisfied that the adjustment was a good one.

Agway Issues Statement On Grain Marketing Loss

SYRACUSE, NY - Agway Inc. issued the following statement Thursday: "On June 28, 1999 it was disclosed to the company that records had been falsified during the fiscal year ended June 1999 to conceal losses from unauthorized speculative activity in the Agricultural Group's Grain Marketing business. An investigation of these matters is currently being conducted utilizing internal financial staff, the Company's external audit firm, and legal counsel. Actions have been taken by the Company to limit the loss from this unauthorized activity. In addition, individuals identified as involved in the unauthorized speculative activity have been terminated from employment. The preliminary unaudited results of that investigation indicate the total loss to the Company associated with the unauthorized activity is less than $10 million. While the investigation in ongoing, the Company, at present, still expects to report positive earnings before income taxes for the year. However, it may be necessary to restate financial results for the first three quarters of the fiscal year ended June 1999 The financial results of this activity will be more fully disclosed in the Company's 1999 annual report filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission."

Education Friendship Agreement Forms

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Solanco High School welcomed a delegation from China as part of an international agricultural exchange.

In early May, two individuals from the Suzhou Agrotechnical Secondary School in The People's Republic of China visited southern Lancaster County to learn about agricultural study in the United States.

In October 1997, a United Nations delegation came to the United States to observe vocational agriculture programs that exist in our country's high schools. One of the visitors was the former principal of Suzhou Agrotechnical Secondary School in The People's Republic of China.

From this visit grew a connection. Dr. Arba Henry, chairman of the agriculture department at Solanco High School, received a letter from the Suzhou School asking if Solanco would be interested in discussing an agreement between the two schools. The schools continued correspondence via fax, and exchanged information about their schools.

In the spring of 1998, as part of their English class, students from the Suzhou School began writing letters to Solanco agriculture students. These letters discussed personal interests and hobbies, told about the city in which their school is located, and talked about aspects of agriculture, including what types of animals the Chinese students raise and their areas of career interest. Solanco students have written back and shared information with the Chinese students.

In May 1998, the two schools began drafting an agreement which outlined what each school hoped to learn and gain from a partnership. After several revisions, the final draft of the Education Friendship Agreement was agreed upon, and Solanco High School formally invited the Chinese delegation to the United States to sign the document.

The following visited Solanco High School: DAI Hongsheng (head of the delegation), who is principal of Suzhou Agrotechnical Secondary School, and LIO Zhishun, the section chief of foreign languages teaching and research of Suzhou Agrotechnical Secondary School. The latter served as the interpreter.

At the May 3, meeting of the Solanco School board of directors, representatives from the delegation and Solanco representatives signed copies of the official Education Friendship Agreement written in both English and Chinese languages. The Chinese presented Solanco with gifts from their homeland, and Solanco returned the gesture with American mementos. The Chinese representatives expressed how they were very impressed by the combination of theory and practical application of teaching at Solanco High School.

Dr. James Diamond, associate dean of Delaware Valley College, helped to establish the educational partnership between the two countries. He complimented Solanco's agriculture department, saying, "This is an exemplary program in the state of Pennsylvania. This is how we wanted to showcase agriculture."

Jessica Schmidt, Solanco High School Principal Gerard Rosolie, Mike Bollinger, Suzhou Agrotechnical Secondary School Principal Dai Hongsheng, Bill Ressler, Amanda Overly and Brian Mull stand together, representing the partnership between agriculture students and administrators from the United States and The People's Republic of China.

During their stay in the Solanco area, the group observed teaching and teaching methods, participated in various Solanco High School classes (agriculture, English, social studies), visited farms to see agriculture students' projects, toured flower gardens and food processing sites, experienced some of the area's local cultural and historic sites, and visited with the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture in Harrisburg.

The Jiangsu Provincial Suzhou Agrotechnical Secondary School is located in Suzhou City, which is a famous tourist city. It is a state level key technical secondary school directly under the jurisdiction of Jiangsu Provincial Department of Agriculture and Forestry.

The school, founded in 1907, covers an area of 21.6 hectares. The campus covers 10.9 hectares and the experimental farm and horticulture farm covers the remaining 10.7 acres. There are 60,000 meters of building area and a collection of thousands of books.

At present, the school has set up 18 specialties, some of which include agronomy, horticulture, agricultural economy, the processing and marketing of farm products, finance and insurance, foreign trade Japanese, foreign trade English, and the computer and its applications.

The school has a student body of 2,600 senior vocational/secondary students and a teaching staff of more than 180. Suzhou School specializes in teaching students how to grow Bonsai.

Apple Growers Learn Techniques To Limit Pesticide Use

GENEVA, N.Y. — Spring got off to a good start for those New York apple growers who attended the Cornell Apple Integrate Pest Manage-ment (IPM) In-depth School in March in Geneva. The fruit school attracted more than 72 participants.

Jeff Soons from Soons Orchard Inc., in New Hampton, N.Y. just 65 miles outside of New York City, considered the school a "very good indoctrination into all the ins and outs of pest control."

"We don't use IPM as intensely as some growers, but I definitely expect to use some of what I learned," he said. The Soons family has been growing apples for 89 years. They farm 25 acres of apples along with an assortment of sweet corn, pumpkins, peaches, and other truck- and farm-market crops.

"We have signed up with Orange County Extension Service for help with scouting for insects on our apple blocks hoping to gain information that will help us limit and space out sprays better," he said. Apples are one of the most intensely sprayed fruit crops, because they are very vulnerable to damage from insects and diseases.

"Attendance was highest from New York State," said NYSAES entomologist Art Agnello, who was chairman of the organizing committee. "There were 40 growers, four consultants, and 15 representatives from industry and government."

The purpose of the course was to provide a forum on the recommended methods of incorporating an integrated pest management and decision process into orchard management operations throughout the year. The format of the school was based on grower feedback from previous IPM fruit schools.

"In the past, growers have told us they have difficulty incorporating research-based management recommendations into their day-to-day operations," said Agnello. "We constructed these sessions with more of a grower's-eye view of the topics."

Speakers were organized by topics that related to each other, and were asked to relate their recommendations to specific times of the growing season, and to include other issues a grower would be dealing with at the same time.

At the school, 29 speakers presented 52 separate talks on apple topics in the field of entomology, plant pathology, horticultural science, fruit and vegetable science, natural resources, cooperative extension, agricultural engineering, and production practices. Most of the speakers whom were from the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, the Hudson Valley Lab at Highland, and CCE. Three guest speakers include Helmut Riedl, from Oregon State University, Starker Wright, from the University of Massachusetts, and Jim Gallott, a grower from Vermont.

Speakers gave their best advice on constructing a pest management plan for each part of the growing season for each developmental stage of the apple. Input was solicited from other specialists as well as the school audience on how to best integrate and coordinate each strategy into an overall orchard system. In addition, information was presented on alternatives to the most commonly recommended practices, including promising results of current research trials, low-spray options, and alternative technologies that may be applicable in the near future

The event was sponsored by the Cornell Fruit Statewide Program Committee.

Education Friendship

The school actively unfolds international exchange and cooperation. It has successively signed the agreements of establishing friendship schools in France and Japan, and has sent teachers to various countries, including the United States, Germany, and Holland to tour and study.

Solanco High School has served the community since its construction in 1961, with additions and renovations completed in 1988 and 1997. The district serves all 186 square miles of southern Lancaster County and is composed of one borough and eight townships. The area is predominantly rural, although there is a steadily increasing population. The community supports education and values a balance between providing precollege and vocational opportunities for students. The student enrollment is 1,362 in grades nine through 12.

Simply Delicious Promotion Has Message For All Pennsylvanians

billboards at strategic locations along highways; and Farm Show and special event promotions.

A number of professional organizations and individuals are involved.

The promotional event on Wednesday was held in the produce department of the Weis Market, located along Route 15, in a mall on the north end of town.

A small crowd of television, radio and newspaper reporters gathered in the store where a podium was set up in front of a display bin with freshly picked sweet corn, tomatoes, cucumbers, etc.

Lights and sound system speakers were set up among the produce, and that served to attract some attention from shoppers, some of whom gathered around the fringe to find out what was happening.

Some of the customers knew that the event was part of the "Simply Delicious" promotion, as signs in the store lobby and elsewhere indicated.

Others weren't sure what was going on, but seemed pleased to find out.

According to Secretary Hayes, he was pleased to join with Weis Markets in their instore promotion.

Secretary Hayes made note of Weis Markets' history of purchasing and marketing Pennsylvania-produced food products, and said the same is true of other retail facilities.

While more and more Pennsylvania raised produce is being purchased and marketed instate, there is much room for growth, here and globally, Hayes said.

Hayes said, "We've only been doing it (the awareness campaign) for a couple of years, and we should have been doing it sooner, but as we close on this century, it is important that people know that they're getting the best.

"Pennsylvania is one of the best in the nation," Hayes said about its quality produce production.

He also told reporters and the audience that it also means Pennsylvania is growing "Products for the Planet" and that the planet starts here.

("Products for the Planet" is another PDA promotional effort, geared more at encouraging exports by stimulating foreign interest in purchasing Pennsylvania products, as well as encouraging the agricultural and food production community to understand that their market is wider than the state or the nation.)

Weis President and CEO Norman Rich told the audience, "At Weis, buying fresh Pennsylvania produce is second nature. We've been doing it for 87 years.

"When we see quality, we know it. As one of the state's largest buyers of produce and dairy products, we know Pennsylvania producers raise the kind of products we like to sell."

Also speaking was McCorkle for the Pa. Food Merchants. "The produce speaks for itself," he said, gesturing to the bins of fresh and colorful vegetables and fruits.

McCorkle said that Weis is an internationally known company with a strong reputation, and that Pennsylvania is home to "some of the greatest famers on the face of the earth. We're going to expand the program next year."

While Weis Markets is headquartered in nearby Sunbury, the Lewisburg store was selected because of its newness, and better media access, according to Weis media spokesperson Dennis Curtin.

Weis Markets is one of the largest purchasers of Pennsylvania produced fruits, vegetables, meat and milk products.

It continues to bottle its own milk (though now purchased through the national Land O' Lakes Cooperative Inc. instead of mainly through local independent producers) and has for years purchased Pennsylvania grown fruits and vegetables.

(As an aside, spokesperson Curtin noted that Weis also now bottles and sells water. The new store had an outside, coin-operated, water-dispensing vending machine for customers to use to fill their own water bottles. It appeared to replicate a point-of-sales experience similar to many of the fill-it-yourself natural spring water operations around the state. A sign at the water vender noted that Weis sells polycarbonate 5-gallon reusable water jugs, suitable for use in a water cooler, in the store.)

Also part of the media event were Ronald Copenhaver of Lebanon County, and Keith Masser of Schuylkill County.

Copenhaver has been producing green beans specifically for Weis Markets, while Masser owns and operates his family business, Sterman Masser Potatoes, with his wife Helen.

With state legislators, representatives, produce growers, shoppers, and various news media watching, State Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. holds a sample of food he's about to taste, while Weis Markets President Norman Rich selects one, during a cooperative in-store kick-off promotion for the state's "Simply Delicious" campaign.

After a successful career in corporate business, Masser returned to the home potato farm of about 250 acres and within short time, created a substantial business that supplies a number of lines of potatoes to several chain stores.

Featured several years ago in Lancaster Farming, Keith had said at the time that as a rule of thumb a business must double itself every 10 years, or it will decline.

At that time, continuing to use his father's name for the business, he had expanded the home farm acreage, and also rented out substantial nearby tracts in order to increase production to meet the needs of supply the contracts. He had 2,500 acres under his control at the time, on a rotational potato production basis, in order to continue the health and productivity of his fields.

Currently that acreage base has expanded to 3,000 acres, and annual potato production from 550 acres. The rest is in rotation.

The business is doing well, and Helen said they just recently completed a $5 million storage facility, and that a son of theirs has returned home to work.

Masser also markets potatoes for the Pennsylvania Potato Growers Cooperative.

The successful strategy he used in improving the market for Masser potatoes was to work to organize dependable supplementary supplies to their own potatoes in order to achieve enough volume to compete for supply contracts with the chains.

Masser and Cooperative potatoes are prepared, stored, packaged and hauled at their Schuylkill County site.

Without such contracts,

Copenhaver said he has been raising beans for Weis for 12 years, and said he plants 50 times per year in order to have the volume and specific quality of beans to supply Weis.

He said he harvests so many batches of beans because only the younger plants provide the kind of quality in the beans that is sought. Furthermore, he explained how to further ensure that the beans are in top shape for consumers, they are immediately chilled to 40 degrees within an hour of being harvested, in order to lock in the quality.

According to Copenhaver, on his 2.5 hour drive north to attend the event, he thought about the free-market production-marketing-consumer relationship system that supplies Americans with the least expensive, safest food on earth.

"We are a blessed people," Copenhaver said. "We can come up and walk in here and we have this incredible, high quality produce."

Both Copenhaver and Masser said they were thankful that Weis has been supportive in offering a close-to-home market for their produce.

"On behalf of the Pennsylvania Cooperative of Potato Growers, I want to thank Weis for their unparalleled support. For more than 50 years, Weis has bought our quality potatoes raised on our red shale soil," Masser said.

He noted that last year Weis had sales of 10 million pounds of Pennsylvania potatoes.

The Simply Delicious campaign is statewide and a number of similar publicity events have been scheduled.

The bottom line for farmers willing to adopt the practices and controls needed to ensure the quantity and quality required in whatever type of fruit or vegetable produced, is that there is a market and that the PDA is working hard to help build recognition of those markets and that quality.

For information on participating stores and growers, visit the PDA website at www.ag.state.pa.us, or call Mike Varner at (717) 787-6901.

Producers stand with industry leadership in front of the state Department of Agriculture's "Simply Delicious" banner, hanging on the front outside wall of the Lewisburg Weis Markets store. From the left are producers Titus Hoover, Paul Lebo, Ronald Copenhaver, Keith Masser, state Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr., Weis Markets President Norman Rich, and Food Merchants' Association President David McCorkle.

Masser First Women To Chair National Potato Promo Board

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — Helen Masser of Sterman Masser Inc. in Sacremento, a Schuylkill County potato grower/shipper, is the first woman to serve as chair of the 108-member National Potato Promotion Board.

Masser, who works with husband Keith to operate the family potato concern, is currently in her fifth year serving with the national board, and can only serve one more year.

In March, she was named chairperson of the board, with a non-consecutive term of one year. She can serve on the board until March 2001.

Not only is she the first woman to serve in the post, the milestone marks the first time that a husband and wife have both served as chair of the national board. Keith was chairman in 1985.

(Turn to Page A33)

Masser First Women To Chair National Potato Promo Board

While general news media no longer pay much attention or give prominence to "first woman" achievements in business stories, Masser said she is proud of the achievement and the confidence in her provided by the other promotion board members.

She is one of seven women out of the 108 National Potato Promotion Board members; three of those seven serve on its Executive Committee, including, of course, Masser.

However, she said her gender is not an issue with board members.

What is an issue is marketing potatoes.

She said that while the majority of United States potatoes are raised in the West, it is very important for Pennsylvania producers to be a part of national promotion and exporting.

New markets for existing stock reduces the chances for domestic oversupplies, which helps Pennsylvania potato growers realize better prices.

A major concern right now for the national board is starting a domestic promotion program targeted at women aged 25 to 50, "Potato: We're Here To Help."

She said the gist of the promotion is to relay to those with responsibility of meal preparation that the potato fits the fast-paced modern lifestyle.

"Potatoes are quickly cooked, microwaved, sauteed, with shells, without shells, and very nutritious, and can be part of every meal," she said.

Also, she said the board is involved in a large international promotion seeking to export United States produced frozen french fries.

She said the board has been promoting frozen french fries globally, and has made progress with a 30-percent increase in exports to Japan, as well as making inroads elsewhere.

Currently, the board is working in South America (home of the potato), to promote french fries, seed exports and dehydrated products.

The board is also seeking to encourage disaster relief agencies, especially those known as private volunteer organizations (PVOs), to use of dehydrated potato products in their rations, because potatoes provide good sources of potassium, Vitamin C, fiber, and complex carbohydrates.

She also said that exporting United States' potatoes and potato products helps with continental production problems.

She said that potatoes imported from Canada have pressured domestic growers.

Canadian potatoes have been attractive to regional buyers because of some logistical advantages and current monetary exchange rate advantages.

Proposal Encourages Agricultural By-Product Technology

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rep. Sheila Miller (R-129) has introduced legislation to encourage the use and development of environmentally sound and affordable methods of managing manure and other animal by-products.

The Agricultural By-Product Technology Act requires the Department of Agriculture to evaluate new management practices and promote the education and use of those practices through loan and grant programs.

"To remain competitive, we must continue to look for ways to improve our agricultural practices, including by-product management," Miller said. "These methods can lead to a number of benefits both for farmers and for society as a whole."

The development of manure digesters and animal by-product technologies that produce energy, pathogen-free fertilizers, animal feed supplements and clean water would increase revenues for agricultural producers, the lawmaker said.

Better by-product management would protect the environment by reducing potential pollutant to air and water and diminishing odors and pathogens that are the natural result of agricultural production. she added.

Her proposal would also create the Agriculture By-Product Technology Board, which would work with the Department of Agriculture to research and evaluate new technologies. It would also be responsible for assessing the regional manure and by-product reduction needs and for encouraging cooperation among the agricultural community, industry and local government regarding the use and development of the new technologies.

Miller's proposal has 19 cosponsors and is now before the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

Dairy Of Distinction

makes drive-by reviews of the farmstead, looking for attention to landscaping, painting, equipment and machinery storage, fencing, etc.

The drive-by can be from a road, or a lane.

The However, the Dairy of Distinction Program, begun in 1983, increased its requirements for those seeking to win the attractive red and white signs presented to winners.

For a number of years the program also checks with the company that receives the milk from the applying farm, to ensure that it meets respectable quality standards.

Photographs of the winning farms and brief descriptions of the families and operations are to be published in Lancaster Farming later this year.

Also, winners are invited to attend a special recognition program held at Penn State University's Ag Progress Days in August.

Those whose applications were not accepted this year are eligible to resubmit an application next year.

There are several sources for additional information for those in Pennsylvania interested in applying next year — contact a regional committee member, a local Extension agent, look for applications in Lancaster Farming and other dairy and farming publications, or write to: Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Department of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802, or call (814) 863-3913.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

With my reign as Crawford County Dairy Princess at an end, I would like to thank the many people and organizations that helped make my past year of promoting the dairy industry a success. First, I thank my team of dedicated dairy maids and alternate, who were always there to help me with the big promotions and were willing to fill in when I was unable to attend an event.

This year, we completed over 400 promotions, reaching thousands of people. This could not have been accomplished without the support of this newspaper, which was always willing to publish the articles I submitted, or the local radio stations who aired my public service announcements. A special thanks to WZPR for recording those spots.

I must also thank all of the groups and organizations that invited me to speak at their meetings, and the many individuals that supported me, each in their own way, throughout the year. Most importantly, I thank the dairy farmers of Pennsylvania for their dedication to an often challenging profession that is so vital to our health and economy.

It has been a challenging year for me and my family, but the rewards have been many. I have made many new and lasting friendships, and will carry this experience with me throughout my life. I recently crowned the new Crawford County dairy princess, and I know you will all continue to support her in her dairy promoting efforts. It will be an educational and rewarding year for her, as it was for me.

No Hay

papillae. Further research showed that the chemical stimuli independent of the mechanical stimuli are responsible for the functional development of the rumen mucosa and papillae, specifically the volatile fatty acids originating from the rumen microbial fermentation of hay and grain. Administering isolated volatile fatty acids to the developing rumen showed that butyric acid was more effective than propionic acid, and this was more effective than acetic acid in stimulating the mucosa and papillae to develop and to increase blood flow to the mucosa.

All this research on mechanical stimuli has led advisors and farmers to emphasize feeding hay to calves as a "scratch factor" for rumen development, ignoring the fact that hay fermentation in the rumen produces mainly acetic acid, which is less effective in rumen development that propionic acid.

While hay feeding is still important for the muscular development of the rumen and health of the papillae, new recommendations from Ohio State University suggest now that hay should be part of the calf diet only after weaning, specifically after weaning at 4 to 5 weeks. If calves are weaned at 8 to 10 weeks of age, they should get no more than 1 pound hay/day, beginning from 6 weeks of age, which would ensure that calves eat a sufficient amount of a coarse grain concentrate.

Generally, calves do not each much hay to start. They waste a lot. Not only will limiting the hay feeding reduce unnecessary and costly waste, but calves will better fill their high energy requirements, which are not satisfied when they are allowed to eat any amount they choose hay over grain concentrate. The result is slow growth of the calf, which, of course, is in opposition to the goal of calf raising.

Thus, the new recommendation—to wean earlier while feeding only grain concentrate and no hay, or to delay feeding until the calf is 6 weeks of age or feed hay only after early weaning at 4 to 5 weeks—will optimize rumen development and put more money into the dairy farmer's pocket.

Visit Ephrata Cloister Saturday Evenings

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — In today's busy world, a peaceful retreat can still be found at the historic Ephrata Cloister. Starting July 10, and continuing every Saturday until August 28, visitors can experience the beauty and calm of this pioneer settlement in the cooler hours just before sunset.

The one-hour tours, offered at 5, 6, 7, and 8 p.m. on Saturday evenings, guide visitors through three 18th century structures, while additional original buildings are open for self-guiding touring. A special exhibit about current archaeological work at the site will be open for these special evening tours.

Founded in 1732 by Conrad Beissel, Ephrata Cloister is one of America's earliest communal societies. Gathered in unique Germanic style buildings, the community consisted of celibate brothers and sisters, and a married congregation of families. The life of the celibate members was characterized by strict discipline and self-denial of comfort. At the zenith of the community in the 1740s and 1750s about 300 members worked and worshiped at the Cloister.

Following the death of the last celibate member in 1813 the married congregation formed the German Seventh Day Baptist Church. Members continued to live and worship at the Cloister until 1934. In 1941 the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania acquired the historic site and began a program of restoration and interpretation. Today, nine original buildings are part of the nearly 30 acre complex open for visitors.

Ephrata Cloister is located in Ephrata Borough, Lancaster County on Route 322 at the intersection with Route 272. The historic site is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. Evening tours of the grounds are provided on Saturday evenings starting July 10 and continuing until August 28. Admission is $6 for adults, $5.50 for senior citizens, $4 for youth aged 6-12 and $17 for families and same household. Individuals wishing more information, or individuals with disabilities who need special assistance should call (717) 733-6600.

Storing Water For Y2K Emergencies

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — In response to the real or perceived problems related to the impending Y2K, there have been numerous questions to cooperative extension offices statewide regarding proper preparations for storage of drinking water Regardless of your personal beliefs on this subject, there is a chance electric power will be interrupted for some period of time (hours to days) on January 1, 2000.

Effects on Water Systems: Power outages may affect both public and private water systems. A recent survey by the American Water Works Association indicated that 100% of public water supply systems serving at least one million customers have a formal plan to deal with Y2K but only 52 percent of small public systems serving less than 10,000 customers have a similar plan. Homeowners with private water wells with electric pumps will be at the mercy of electric providers. It appears that homeowners on small community water systems or private water systems are most susceptible to Y2K problems.

Amount of Water to Store: Most emergency planning agencies are recommending storage of water before Y2K. A minimum of one gallon of water per person per day should be stored The American Red Cross recommends stocking disaster supplies, including water, to last several days to one week The Federal Emergency Management Agency similarly recommends storing at least three days of food and water prior to Y2K Many state government agencies are making similar recommendations

Kinds of Containers: Questions have arisen about the types of containers that can be used to safely store water. Containers for water storage should be FDA approved. Many types of containers meet this criteria but the most common are one-gallon plastic milk or water jugs. These will be acceptable but colored are better than clear and jugs with screw lids are better than those with push caps Larger five-gallon, plastic, colored, FDA-approved containers are also available for water storage. Milk jugs should be thoroughly washed with soap and water and rinsed with a chlorine solution and plenty of water. Fill jugs as full as possible and store in a cool, dark location. Water used to fill jugs should be disinfected preferably before storage.

There are numerous ways to disinfect water supplies in an emergency. The most common methods involve some form of chlorination or boiling.

Boiling – vigorous boiling for one minute will kill any disease-causing microorganisms present in water. The flat taste of boiled water can be improved by pouring it back and forth from one container to another (called aeration), by allowing to stand for a few hours, or by adding a small pinch of salt for each quart of water boiled.

Chemical treatment – When boiling is not practical, chemical disinfection should be used. The two chemicals commonly used are chlorine and iodine.

For more information on disinfection of water, call your county Penn State Cooperative Extension Office.

An excellent write-up on emergency disinfection of water can be found on the EPA web page at http://www.epa.gov/OGWDW/faq/emerg.html

Indulge in cherries this summer with (clockwise from left) Triple Cherry Pie, Cherry Fizz, Cherry Spumoni and Sweet Cherry Bars

Cherries
An All-American Harvest
Savor the Flavor of Summer's Best

Cherries are America's favorite summertime fruit. They bring the fresh taste of the season alive. And because they're versatile, flavorful and nutritious, cherries make a great snack for warm weather activities or an irresistible centerpiece at pool parties and backyard barbecues.

There are two kinds of cherries—sweet and tart. Each has its own distinctive uses, but both offer the same wholesome goodness. They have no fat and are low in calories. That makes cherries fit right in with American's increased focus on health. Cherries also are high in potassium and are loaded with antioxidants and other cancer-fighting compounds.

Cherries are one of the few fruits that are truly seasonal. The U.S. crop of fresh sweet cherries is only available in the summer months. Sweet cherries in the Northwest begin ripening in mid-June. The prime time for fresh sweet cherries is July, but late-season varieties extend the joy of cherries into mid-August. Canned and frozen sweet cherries are available all year. Tart cherries also ripen in July, but they are seldom sold fresh because they are highly perishable. They are canned or frozen with-in 24 hours of harvest for use throughout the year.

Triple Cherry Pie

Tart, sweet and dried cherries are a winning trio in this summertime favorite

- 2-1/2 cups fresh or frozen tart cherries (about 1 pound), pitted
- 2-1/2 cups fresh sweet cherries (about 1 pound), pitted
- 1/2 cup dried tart cherries
- 3/4 cup granulated sugar
- 2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- Pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie
- 1 tablespoon butter, chopped

Combine tart cherries, sweet cherries, dried cherries, sugar, tapioca, almond extract and nutmeg in a large bowl, mix well Let stand 15 minutes (It is not necessary to thaw frozen tart cherries before using)

Line a 9-inch pie plate with half the pastry Fill with cherry mixture, dot with butter Roll out remaining pastry and cut into six strips about 1-inch wide and 10-inches long Weave into a lattice pattern over cherries Trim edges, pinching top and bottom crusts together

Bake in a preheated 375° oven 50 to 60 minutes, or until crust is golden and filling is bubbly If necessary, cover edge of crust with aluminum foil to prevent overbrowning Let cool before serving

Makes 8 servings

Cherry Spumoni

Cherries, chocolate and almonds combine in this ice cream sensation

- 1-1/2 cups heavy cream
- 1/2 cup sweetened condensed milk
- 1/2 teaspoon rum flavoring
- 1 (21-ounce) can cherry pie filling
- 1 cup pitted fresh sweet cherries
- 1/3 cup miniature chocolate chips
- 1/3 cup slivered almonds, toasted*

Combine heavy cream, sweetened condensed milk and rum flavoring in a large bowl, mix well Refrigerate 30 minutes

Lightly grease inside of a 9x5x3-inch bak-ing pan Cut a piece of plastic wrap 24-inches long Line bottom and sides of pan with plastic wrap so that several inches of wrap overhang each long side

Remove cream mixture from refrigerator Beat with electric mixer on high speed 3 to 4 minutes or until soft peaks form Do not overbeat Fold in cherry pie filling, fresh sweet cherries, chocolate chips and almonds Spoon mixture evenly into lined pan Cover and freeze at least 5 hours or overnight

Queen of Hearts

Cherries won the hearts of Americans long ago. European settlers had hardly stepped on the soil of the New World before they began planting tart cherry trees, especially in the Great Lakes area. Commercial tart cherry orchards were planted in the late 1800s

Tart cherries are sometimes called "pie" cherries or sour cherries. That's because they are excellent for pies and other desserts. They have a natural bright red color and tangy flavor. The major variety of tart cherry grown in the United States is the Montmorency. The peak of the tart cherry harvest is the middle of July

1–2–Freeze

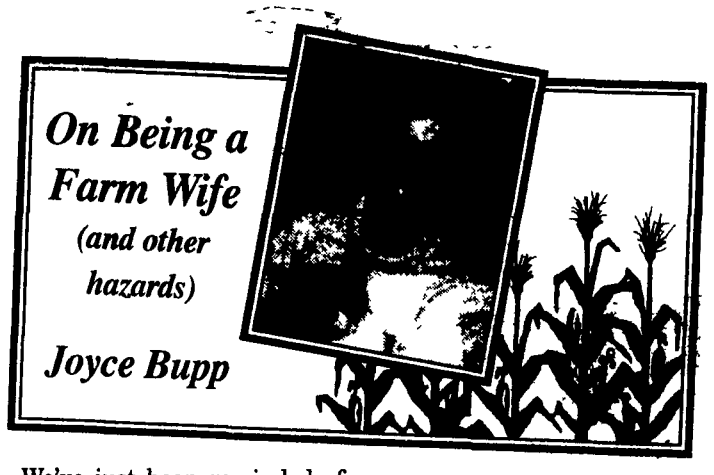
Both tart and sweet cherries are easy to freeze.

1. Rinse and drain cherries thoroughly.
   For cherries that you plan to use in pies or other recipes, it is best to pit them before freezing.
2. Pack cherries in useable quantities in freezer-proof containers or plastic freezer bags.
3. Freeze. These frozen cherries will maintain their color and flavor for up to one year.

Try Dry

Dried tart cherries are great for snacks or in a variety of recipes. Their tangy flavor makes them a tasty treat that everyone loves Dried tart cherries are relatively new and are available at gourmet and specialty stores and selected supermarkets Here are a few ideas for using them. Let your imagination be your guide

- Cereal becomes a breakfast treat with the addition of dried tart cherries They are especially good in oatmeal.
- Dried tart cherries are delicious in meat sauces Serve over poultry, pork or wild game.
- Your kids will rave about pancakes if you add a few dried cherries to the batter.
- Give trail mixes new flavor with the addition of dried tart cherries. A combination of cherries, banana chips, chocolate chips and peanuts is particularly good
- As a party treat, combine dried cherries with cashews, smoked almonds or mixed nuts



We've just been reminded of another reason why southcentral Pennsylvania is a desirable place to live.

"Gee, it's nice not to worry about cougars when you go out for a walk," observed our daughter a few days ago.

Well, gosh. I hadn't thought much about that.

Having spent several summers as Forest Service employees working the Northwest's canyons and mountain ranges, our daughter and son-in-law have a healthy respect for the huge native cats of that area.

We surely DON'T have to worry about cougars when we go for walks around here. And that's a relief, especially after reading last week about a Pittsburgh man honored for having saved a young Montana camp hiker last summer literally from the jaws of a mountain lion.

While they aren't on par with cougars, the bugs around here can be brutal. For instance, just this morning, while working at the computer, I was attacked by a crazed firefly with its days and nights mixed up. And the Japanese beetles are likely hatching out this very moment.

It was the bugs in fact, which had initiated the cougar discussion, evident in numerous red welts dotting our daughter's shorts-clad legs after wild raspberry picking. The fat, juicy fruit seemed especially tasty this year, and plentiful around the weedy edges of the meadow woodlot which she's named—in keeping with their sons' affinity for Winnie The Pooh and company—the Ten Acre Wood. (Which is actually more like two acres).

"It was a relief to hear rustling and know it was only squirrels," our bug-bitten berry picker figured about harvesting the wild fruit wealth outside the woodlot.

While thankfully not home to cougars, the Ten Acre Wood does boast a veritable summertime insect collection, along with a couple of dozen busybody squirrels, several groundhog families, numerous chattering chipmunks, bunnies aplenty and the occasional hatch of a red-tailed hawk fledgling.

Our local wild "critters" are far less threatening than mountain lions, but seem to grow in increasing abundance with the passing years. We've spotted our local whitetail doe but her usual twin offspring have not yet accompanied her into the alfalfa fields.

This season's two hatches of Canada geese are nearly grown, and the parents now growing back their wing and tail feathers following the annual molt. Their combined 10 youngsters are about to go airborne, and head off join up with the large flocks.

Remaining longer on the pond, we expect, are two recently-hatched nests of mallard ducklings. We haven't had ducklings on the pond in several years, probably because of the past abundance of foxes, so we were delighted to spy the first tiny puffs of brownish-colored fluff bobbing across the water behind the parents. Equally welcome was the unexpected visit, after several years of absence, of some young wood ducks.

Right on schedule, the great blue heron puts in its appearance daily to partake of the season's fish fry. We've seen this tall, lanky fisherbird yank six-inch goldfish from the pond and swallow them in one gulp. You can literally see the bulge of the fish as the bird swallows it down its slender throat. Appetizing huh?

Green herons have also become regular visitors, as they usually do in mid-summer, and at least one white cattle egret has paused briefly in the meadow to partake of the bug bounty stirred by the grazing heifers.

So far, though, no one has spotted the skunk family which turned up frequently last summer and kept us extra alert as we wandered about the ponds in late evenings. But our neighborhood groundhog hunter relates spying what are likely weasels zipping around the meadow. Rather weasels than skunks.

And, rather skunks than cougars

I think.

Cut Flower Short Course

HOLLIDAYSBURG (Blair Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension announces the upcoming second annual "Cut Flower Short Course." This two-day program will be held on Thursday and Friday, August 26 and 27, at the Berks Campus of Penn State University.

Cut Flower production and marketing are fast becoming more than just a small farm alternative. As growers rapidly explore diversification and alternative cropping systems, cut flowers increasingly appear as a viable, profitable crop. This program will cover many aspects of cut flower production including scheduling, market analysis and development, pest controls and cultivar selection. A major feature of this program is the combination of classroom instruction, computer laboratory, and cultivar field trials.

Preregistration is required. The cost of the program is $85 per person and includes all program materials, morning coffee and pastry, and lunch both days Registration is limited, so call soon. For registration information, call (814) 693-3265

Camp Trek

Summer Assistant's log Tuesday June 29. My crew and I are about to set out on a very treacherous voyage, a voyage into the unknown. We will travel to a wilderness full of dangerous creatures and wild inhabitants. It is a dangerous voyage that we are embarking on, for there is no turning back, and no certainty that we will make it back alive. My friends, we are going to camp.

Our charter bus departed from the Lancaster County Farm and Home Center promptly at 8 30 on Tuesday morning. Our captain, Katina Showman, decided to go ahead of us earlier that morning in order to prepare the camp for our impending arrival. The group consisted of 20 Lancaster County 4-Hers; most of them were about to experience camp for the very first time. Our destination was 4-H Camp Shehaqua. Located in the Pocono Mountains, it is miles from civilization and can be classified as a classical "movie" type camp. It has everything, from the dining hall with the large stone fireplace to the cabins that don't have electricity. This was to be the first time that Lancaster County 4-H attended Shehaqua. As it turned out, it would also be an experience I would never forget.

The first order of business, after arriving at camp, was registration. Lancaster was not the only county at camp this week. Also in attendance were Lebanon and Cumberland Counties. In total we ended up with 91 4-Hers, all ready to have an exciting week at camp. My job, along with the other staff members was to make sure that they did.

Each day the campers took part in workshops, which increased their knowledge of nature and allowed them to experience new and different things. My workshop was the camp rope course. Shehaqua's ropes course is a low ropes course and is made up of various obstacles that challenge and encourage campers to work together in order to succeed. The particular obstacle that I was working with was the rope bridge and zip line. The zip line is the most popular feature of the rope course, and basically consists of a cable connected between two trees, which are very far apart. In order to reach the zip line a camper must cross a Rope Bridge and then climb up a log to the platform where it is located. Once there, the camper is secured to the cable from their harness. After this is completed, and all safety checks have been cleared, the camper is then sent down the zip line for a short but exhilarating ride.

In order to go down the zip line the campers needed to be fitted with harnesses, this is where I come in. The harnesses had to be relatively tight in order to ensure that the campers would not hurt themselves while going through the course or traveling down the zip line. I think I must have helped to strap-up every kid in the camp at least once over the course of those four days. This is yet another talent that I mastered as summer assistant, professional harness outfitter. Besides outfitting the campers with harnesses I also assisted them as they traversed the Rope Bridge, otherwise known as "spotting." Spotting is a very important part of the rope course. When a camper is on an obstacle, spotters are there to provide helping hands and give support if the camper should lose their balance. I was not the only person spotter however; all of the campers had to help do this if they were not going through the course. This was part of the teamwork of the rope course since it forced the children to work together and also to learn to trust each other. The only problem was coordinating the campers with their spotting this became my job as I directed both the spotters and the campers through the rope course safely.

All in all it was a pretty successful workshop and it once again provided me with talents that I never knew I had.

I will have to end my log entry here. There is much more to report about my peerless journey but I am in great need of sleep. I will report more to you next week about my experiences at the camp with lions, and tigers, and BEARS. Oh my!

Kid Friendly Vacations

At this point in the summer I hope you are either anticipating a family vacation or laughing at snapshots of one that has already happened.

Time away from the daily routine as a family group can make you a stronger, healthier family. The location of that vacation is not as important as the fact that the family can "get away" together and grow closer in a more relaxed atmosphere. Vacations provide an opportunity for family members to recommit to each other.

Great family vacations do not have to cost a lot of money. They do require an investment of time and commitment. Family members must be able to "disconnect" from work, chores, friends, etcetera for a few days and focus on enjoying each other. This is easier when children are young, but not impossible for families with teens and young adults.

Part of the trick for success is choosing activities that all can enjoy. That may mean giving each person a chance to choose an activity to include in the vacation plan.

Staff at the Family Resource Center, Minneapolis, Minn. has compiled the following tips for traveling with children that will make the experience more enjoyable for both parents and children:

• Tell your child about the trip. Children do better when they know what to expect. Provide your child with details: what days and times you will leave, how you will travel, how long you will stay, what you will pack, what you will do on the way, what you will do while you are there.

• Let your child help in planning portions of the trip. This might include items to pack, or activities on the way or places to eat.

• Plan several vacation activities specifically for children. Choose child-friendly eating places and plan to eat before children are overly hungry. A tired, hungry child cannot maintain acceptable behavior.

• Pack a travel bag of fun activities for your child. Include all-time favorites, but also new activity books, markers and other items for peak entertainment value. A few well-chosen items that provide variety are better than too many. A child's tape player with headphones can be a worthwhile investment. Help your child choose a new tape, just for the trip (not to be used before departure). Throughout the trip help your child keep his or her bag organized for best use. This will ensure nothing gets misplaced or left behind as well as teach the child how to take care of his belongings.

• Pack your "parent travel bag." Include non-perishable snacks, treats, and a fun book that can be relied upon when your child is hungry or needs extra attention. You will want to keep this bag close to you. It can also carry "sleep buddies" or a special blanket.

• Children who like to write or draw pictures may enjoy keeping a journal of the trip. You can purchase one or make one by stapling pages together. One good time for journal entry might be in a restaurant after ordering. Your child might enjoy sharing the journal with friends after returning home.

• If the means of transportation is not your car, right before departure, tell your child exactly what to expect on that part of the trip. This can alleviate some fears, and give the child a clue as to what behavior is expected.

• Use proper child safety seats and belts while traveling by car or plane. Not only is this the safest way for your child to travel, but children often feel more comfortable in their car seat and are used to falling asleep in it.

• If you are traveling by car, use the restroom before leaving and plan plenty of rest stops along the way. Plan to stop every few hours to let your child stretch and burn off some energy. Time each stop, if needed and give a two minute warning to head back to the car. These stops will pay off in the long run with a happier child who also sleeps better.

• Expect the last day to be a transition day when you start making the mental transition back to home. Children (and some adults), resist transitions and will show frustration. Even when home, expect some adjustment time for all. Planning to arrive home in time for a relaxed unpacking and restful night's sleep can do much to smooth reentry into everyday life.

Pomraning Family Works Cooperatively

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

DELTA (York Co.) — Farming has always been a cooperative effort at the My-T dairying operation of the Teresa and Myron Pomraning family.

The Pomranings' farm near Delta is located on the picturesque, southeastern York County plateau bordering the Susquehanna River. Both Teresa and Myron grew up on this area of the county and met when he was a senior and she a freshman in the FFA and voag programs at Red Lion Area High School. Myron's family operated a dairy farm and Teresa's grandfather owned the Airville Farm Supply, where her father was a mechanic. Her Crowl family also had a general farm, where she raised sheep for 4-H competition.

Myron and Teresa married in 1979, while he was still employed on his family's farm. On May 15, 1980, they began milking their own 43 head in the barn they built at their current dairy operation. The first of their four daughters was born the following year.

Longtime supporters of collective marketing for their milk, the Pomranings are members of Maryland-Virginia Cooperative Milk Producers. For several years, they participated as a couple in the educational opportunities offered through the Young Cooperator (YC) program. With Myron past the age limit of the competition, Teresa entered this year's annual YC program as an individual. When the winners were announced at the awards presentation during the co-op's annual meeting at Hagerstown, Maryland, Teresa's name topped the list as Maryland-Virginia's YC winner for 1999. She is the cooperative's first individual and first woman Young Cooperator.

"This was their first year to emphasize that competitors didn't have to participate as a couple," Teresa explains of her involvement. While eight individuals and couples actively competed in the contest, more than 20 young cooperative famiiles were represented at the YC educational conference. Competitors submitted a four-page application detailing their farm, family, community and cooperative activities, underwent a personal interview before a three-judge panel and each answered a "fishbowl" question.

As YC representative, Teresa will participate in Maryland-Virginia's monthly board of directors meetings to gain a broader view of the cooperative's marketing activities and share her perspective on issues. She will also represent the co-op at the National Institute of Cooperative Education (NICE) conference in Utah in late July and the annual National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) meeting scheduled in November in Tennessee. As Maryland-Virginia's cooperative representative, she will sit on the NMPF's Young Cooperator advisory board and take part in planning for the YC portion of the NMPF year 2000 meeting.

Teresa Pomraning mixes pudding for one of the tasty treats she served while helping to host the recent informational meeting and afternoon tea for York County's dairy princess candidates and court.

One goal of Teresa's is to have the dairy cooperative's members in some way learn to know one another a little better.

"You will sit with someone you never met before at a meeting, and come away having learned all sorts of interesting things about them and what they do," she reflects. "Maybe we could have some type of member "corner" in our news publication where those interesting things, which our dairy producers do, could be shared. I think it would help to generate more of a community feeling among us."

While the extra meetings will keep Teresa away from the My-T family farm a bit more than usual, the Pomranings are accustomed to filling in for one another as needed. When Myron developed severe back problems several years ago., Teresa stepped in to handle the milking chores. Their four daughters, Jessica, 18, Stephanie, 16, Kimberly, 13 and Suzann, 12, milk in rotation as needed, along with Myron and a young Amish woman who helps regularly with the dairy herd. Myron also drives milk truck on a relief basis for P. and T. trucking of Rising Sun, Maryland.

The Pomraning sisters all own cattle and their 4-H animals add "color" to the original Holstein herd. They chose their Jersey, Guernsey, and Ayrshire breeds, but were supported by their parents who recognized the variety of animals as less sibling-competitive in the showring. Jessica, who just completed a year of serving as York County's dairy princess, will begin classes in communications and marketing. Stephanie is interested in the dairy science area, while Kimberly "might be interested in farming" according to her parents. Suzann has not yet set her sights toward a particular career.

Teresa's milking and barn chores are done mostly on the fill-in-as-needed basis, since she holds a full-time job, is taking college classes and operates her own income tax business.

She is financial manager of Deer Creek Equipment Company at Whiteford, Maryland, overseeing the range of finance, accounting and billing responsibilities. Prior to their marriage, she had worked in the office of the Crowl family's Airville Farm Supply business.

"Back then, we had to keep our inventory hand-written on parts cards," she recalls with a chuckle.

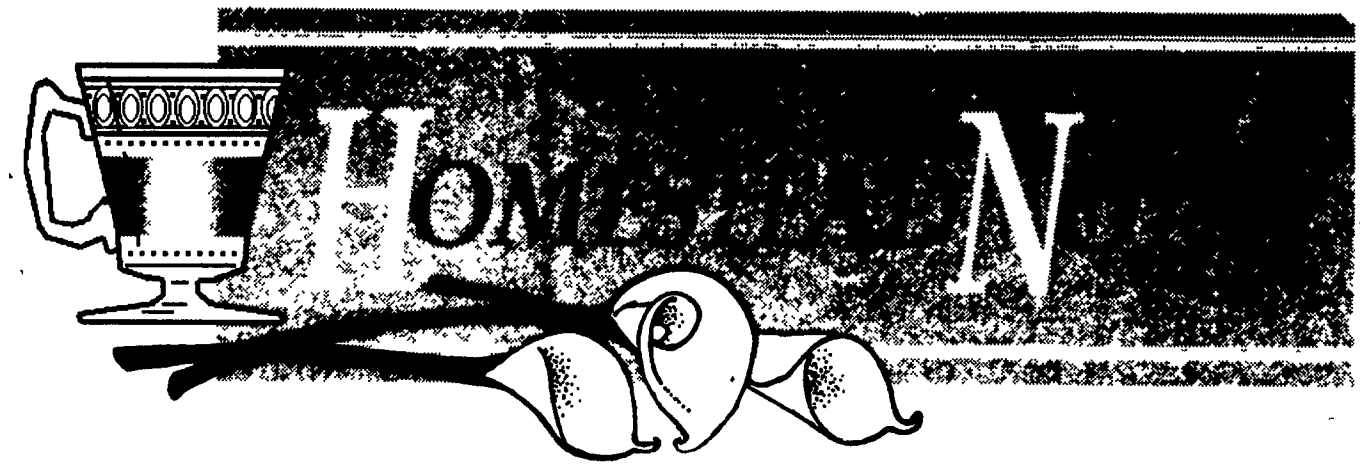
From January through mid-April, her income tax service keeps Teresa moonlighting at home for some 350 clients. Computers have considerably modernized recordkeeping for both the equipment firm and her income tax clients.

"I've always wanted to go to college. It's a matter of self-satisfaction," says Teresa of the evening courses she has been taking for slightly more than a year at Penn State's York Campus. She has completed about one-third of the requirements toward a two-year business associate's degree, with the ultimate goal of earning a full bachelor's degree. Deer Creek Equipment is supportive of her college studies, assisting with some financial support.

Her studies will slow for the summer, however, with the cooperative-related meetings she will be attending as well as other industry and community activities. The Pomranings will host two of the county's 4-H exchangees who will visit from Colorado later this summer. She is also helping to coach the state Quiz Bowl team which will compete at the National Ayrshire Convention being hosted by Maryland breeders at the Turf Valley resort.

Active in their local Pine Grove Presbyterian Church, Teresa serves as congregational treasurer and regular member of the church choir. Her love of singing and high soprano voice takes her to various services and gatherings as a soloist. While representing their cooperative at an earlier NICE conference two years ago, Teresa opened one morning's meetings with an a cappella rendition of The Lord's Prayer.

"I really want to encourage young people to get involved in the Young Cooperator programs," she emphasized. "The contest is just a minor part of it, it's the learning and the friendship that are a much bigger part."



Most people, both adults and teen-agers, don't realize how strongly food is tied to their emotions. Some people eat more when they're upset; some stop eating.

When feelings become too confusing, the result can be an eating disorder. An eating disorder is an unhealthy way of eating. People with eating disorders abuse food, the way other people abuse drugs or alcohol.

Many teen-agers slide into eating patterns that put their present and future health at risk. One common eating disorder among teenagers is bulimia. People with bulimia go on wild eating binges. Right after the binge, they go to the opposite extreme. They go on crash diets, or vomit, or use laxatives to get rid of the food.

Bulimia can be very dangerous. Bulimics don't get the nutrients their bodies need for healthy growth. Frequent vomiting can cause their teeth to decay. In extreme cases, nutrient imbalances can even cause the heart to stop.

The normal growth cycle conflicts with the desire of many teen-agers to be thin. Storing extra fat is the body's way of getting ready for the growth spurt which usually happens between ages 10 and 14 for girls and 12 to 16 for boys. Most girls will become ten inches taller and 40 to 50 pounds heavier. Most boys will grow 12 inches and put on 50 to 60 pounds. To feel good about themselves during this time of rapid physical change, teen-agers need to be reassured that these body changes are normal.

Maintaining an appropriate body weight is an admirable goal for anyone. But, the problem that often crops up among teens who diet is that they sometimes use extreme measures to achieve weight loss and many times have unrealistic body images. Fasting or skipping meals, following the latest fad diets or taking "water" pills (diuretics) or exercising fanatically are not safe or even the most effective methods for losing body fat.

Statements such as "I don't eat animal products," or "I don't eat dairy foods" exemplify the way some teens segment their diets and sometimes eliminate entire categories of foods. If teens do not take care to include sufficient amounts of macronutrients—fat, carbohydrate and protein—food avoidance can be detrimental to health and nutritional status.

Vegetarianism is a growing movement among adolescents. The diets of adolescent vegetarians can be quite low in protein and trace minerals, particularly on a vegetarian diet. Therefore, those teens need to incorporate a variety of protein sources into their diets to get all the essential amino acids. Educating teens about the importance of a variety of protein sources is essential in order to get this vital nutrient into the diet.

What's more teens often fail to see that achieving a more healthful and attractive physique is not measured solely by numbers on a scale. If a teen wants to lose weight, he or she should look to the Food Guide Pyramid for guidance. Choosing more of the lower-fat options from the grains, fruit, vegetable and protein groups of the Pyramid will provide the energy and nutrients teens need without extra calories.

Extreme changes in eating and personal behavior are cues to parents that their teen-ager may be developing an eating disorder. Has he or she stopped eating with the family? Are larger or minimal amounts, or only a narrow range of foods being eaten? Does the teen-ager seem preoccupied with weight, become unusually withdrawn, secretive, or seclusive? Are there dramatic moods swings?

Behavior changes are not uncommon to most teen-agers making the transition from child to adult, but parents need to be attentive to these changes. If your youngster is developing an eating disorder, early treatment is important to recovery.

For more information on a healthy diet, request a copy of the "Food Guide Pyramid" from your local cooperative extension office.

Farm Women

Lancaster Society 20

Thursday, July 1, Farm Women Society No. 20 met at the home of Anna Mary Groff in the picnic area, with Freda Wimer as co-hostess. Following the delicious lunch Anna Mary read the 24th Psalm followed by the reading "It Really Doesn't Matter." The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison and the Pledge to the Flag was repeated.

The 17 members present named their favorite flower for the roll call. The president, Valeria Ferguson, presided at the short business meeting. Helen Tout reported two cards sent and members will be sponsoring "Miss Solanco." The president presented Lillian Winters with her "90 Year Pin" as her birthday is July 6. Anna Mary Groff also received a pin for her 80 year one. In August members will meet at Huffnagle Park for the picnic.

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster Farm Women Society 18 held a meeting June 19. Hostess was Edna Buckwalter assisted by her daughter. Ten husbands and guests attended. Among the guests were Arlene Witman and her husband. Arlene has held many offices and guided affairs pertaining to the county and state Farm Women societies.

Presiding president Martha Stoner called on Millie Greider for devotions. She gave a poetry reading for senior citizens. Martha also reported on members who recently were injured.

Most of those present made their way to the pedal car museum. A high value is now placed on these former children's toys. One reportedly sold for $16,000.

Conflicting activities during this busy season filled with flower and craft shows prevented some members from attending this meeting. There will be no July meeting.

Lancaster Society 14

Due to numerous conflicts February's regular meeting date was moved to the home of Ellen Newswanger. A treat was prepared by hostesses Marion Rohrer and Mildred Herr. After the business of the day and a devotional by Ellen Doris Welk from AAA challenged with facts of "Driving Safety."

Society #22 entertained Society 14 at the Willow Street United Church of Christ. Dolls, al made by the hand of Allegra Leininger, were very delightful and most interesting.

The April Meeting was at the "Corn Maze" farm, home of Donna Coleman. Members came w/bags full of paper supplies or personal items to be donated to Christ's Home. Dorothy Musser and Mary Louise Landis performed the duties of hostesses providing a delicious treat. President Polly announced that the Red Cross has been chosen for the recipients for County project. Joyce Hershey portrayed "Tillie," in her attire of earlier days and with her basket of eggs they could not trade for other 'goods' had members in stitches of laughter. Very easily she changed roles to become Rep. Art Hershey's wife giving us tips as to how to write your congressman. By special request, Donna Coleman acted out a touching likeness of Mary the mother of our Lord.

Again the regular meeting of Society #14 was waived in favor of the statewide Spring Rally of Farm Women Societies. Eleven members joined the hundreds of ladies gathered on May 12 at the Holiday Inn in Cumberland County. Society #15 hosted and planned a great day.

June 9 members entertained ladies from Society #3. Hostesses Ruth Combs, Helen Herr, Clara Rohrer, and president Polly Stoltzfus arranged a festive atmosphere in a conference room at the Farm and Home Center with flowers and much food. After a meaningful devotional meditation by Ruth Combs, members went on a trip to New Zealand led by Vera and Rod Moseman on their tandem bicycle. The slides proved that New Zealand is a beautiful country; they also proved that riding tandem up hill and down hill has to be a special experience of togetherness. Members played some pencil games with visiting friends before parting.

Farm women #14 invites new members to join and enjoy good times, great friendships, and opportunities for serving others.

Little Black Pig Squeels 'Put Me Down'

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — It was clear by the loud squeals coming from the fat, little black pig, that he wanted to be put on the ground.

The little black pig didn't mind being with all the other animals in the petting zoo. But he did not like to be held by boys and girls.

He wasn't used to being held. Being held made him afraid. Sometimes his little feet were left to dangle in mid-air. This scared the little black pig half to death.

So he squealed as loud as he could . . . "WEEEH . . . WEEEH . . . WEEEH!"

Now the baby goat loved being cuddled and held. When the baby goat was cuddled and held, he took the opportunity to lick a chin. Next, the baby goat tried to chew the chin.

That's because a chin is right above a chest. A chest is where human beings hold little goats close when they are cuddling them.

The baby goat was doing just what it is supposed to do. Nibbling on whatever is nearest to its mouth.

The poor little black pig had no idea he looked so cute. He was admired by everybody, even grown-ups.

He was the only animal in the petting zoo that was black as coal and fat as butter. He wasn't much longer than a 12-inch ruler that boys and girls learn to use in school.

A baby goat enjoys being cuddled. It will lick someone's chin and try to chew their chin.

He didn't look at all like the black and white baby calf, or even the pretty Jersey calf.

Baby calves are adorable, of course, but when you compare them to a little black pig, calves are BIG babies.

He wasn't like the chickens. Even when they are fully grown, chickens are small creatures with lots of feathers and snappy beaks. "Cluck, cluck, cluck," is how they talk.

The little black pig certainly was not like the geese, who were white as snow and had very long necks. Geese are fat at one end and skinny at the other end. They like to walk around together.

The ducks do, too.

When they walk you see how the end that is fat, waddles from side to side.

The little black pig wasn't anything like the donkey. The donkey was the biggest of all the animals who came to the petting zoo.

Under the donkey were four long legs. On his big head stood two pointed ears. The donkey was not allowed to roam around inside the petting zoo fence.

The little black pig had a hard day at the petting zoo. He was there without brothers or sisters, his mother or his daddy.

Strangers were walking everywhere. He tried to stay away from them but they wanted to play.

The little black pig did not know about games or being cuddled. Where he came from, he just minded his own barnyard business.

"WEEEH . . . WEEEH . . . WEEEH," he squealed, loudly, when a little boy caught him.

The little black pig wriggled with all his might and kept on squealing as loud as he could.

He could not escape from the little boy's strong arms.

The little black pig did not understand that the young boy wanted to be a friend.

And the little boy, who didn't want the little black pig to be afraid, did not understand what all the squealing was about.

Then a big person explained it to the boy. He told hiim that the little black pig likes all his feet to touch something solid.

When they don't, the big person told the boy that the little black pig is a very insecure fellow.

The little black pig squealed with all its might when a young boy caught it at the petting zoo.

A little black pig, therefore will squeal with all his heart "WEEEH . . . PUT ME DOWN . . . WEEEH . . . PUT ME DOWN . . . WEEEH!"

Baby calves are much bigger than baby pigs. A donkey also came to the petting zoo.

Why are flies so hard to swat?
Houseflies seem to know just when a fly swatter is headed their way for one very simple reason — they have more than two eyes!
To start with, a fly has three small, simple eyes (or regular eyes, like yours) that sit near the very top of its head. But it sees mostly with its two bulging compound eyes
The compound eyes sit on each side of the fly's head. Compound eyes are made up of about 4,000 individual units, or facets. Each facet has two lenses — one on the surface and a cone-shaped lens beneath. The two lenses work together to focus light onto a sensitive structure that is connected to the optic nerve The nerve then tells the fly's brain what it sees
When all five eyes work together, a fly can see in a 300-degree radius But because every single facet in the two compound eyes sends an image to the fly's brain, the fly sees multiple images of the same thing It would be a lot like watching the same movie on hundreds of television sets at once
Entomologists (people who study insects) aren't sure how clearly a fly can see with all these images, but they do know that a fly's vision is well-adapted to detect motion — like an incoming fly swatter!

Taking Time by Rebecca Escott

In a Rut?

The kids have only been out of school for three weeks, and already they're saying, "I'm bored."

Last night you opened up the refrigerator and didn't see anything interesting to cook for supper.

Friends called and suggested a get-together, and when you met it was just the "same old, same old" small talk.

Are you in a rut? Now's a perfect time to exercise your creativity muscle.

Most adults quickly say, "I'm not creative."

Unfortunately we pass that message quickly on to our children. Children at two will do the most hysterical, ridiculous things because they know few rules and see thousands of possibilities. But our toys and language, if we're not careful, can quickly limit that creativity.

Several months ago, I attended a seminar that challenged my creativity muscle (and pointed out how I could easily get in a rut, doing only the familiar instead of reaching for something new and different).

The workshop started with a challenge for each participant to write down as many "birds" as they could think of in two minutes time. Well I was so proud. I had listed song birds, waterfowl, poultry, non-flying birds, birds of prey. I thought I had done well until the facilitator asked how many of us had things on our lists that weren't "avian." Well a few participants had broken out of the familiar pattern and wrote things like Larry Bird, thunderbird, bird brain and The Byrds.

The other point she made was that our society forces us into thinking in a "yes, no" "either this or that" pattern that often leads to ineffective decisions because we don't look at situations broadly. She recommended pushing people to generate at least three solutions, options, etc.

This idea is supported by Ronald Slaby, an expert on violence prevention. He has noted that aggressive people often have limited ideas and solutions to conflict and they choose violence. Starting at an early age, he recommends that parents and child care providers help children think of lots of possibilities by asking, "What else could we do?" followed by "What might happen if we do that?" Don't stop when one acceptable choice is given. Ask the question again. Allow for crazy ideas.

This is one way to spark and nurture creativity in a child. Another way is to provide great materials for play.

A Zillions magazine recently evaluated popular summer toys on the market for their "fun" factor. At the close of the article, they asked, "Could a $5 beach ball compete with this groups of toys for fun?" The answer was a resounding "Yes." The kids who tested the toys loved the ball... it could go in and out of water, was fun for kids of all skill levels, you could use it for many activities.

From this, all of us could learn a valuable lesson about toys. The more defined a toy's play is, the less creativity it inspires. One of the best toy investments we can make is in a set of blocks. Blocks grow with a child from infancy to adolescence. You can make a collection of blocks more interesting by adding a few other props like toy cars, small animal figures, doll furniture, and left-overs like toilet paper rolls and empty spools to the box. Watch your children explore and create at their level. When they're on a building break say something like, "Tell me what you made." Empty boxes are another great "toy."

One of the most familiar ways for nurturing creativity is through art. Child development experts advise that coloring books, patterns and pre-cut models leave little room for creativity, imagination, and individuality. Materials like these stress following directions and using "the right colors" and making something that looks like what everyone else makes. It is better to provide a box of inexpensive supplies, a box of recycled scrap paper, and encouragement.

When encouraging creativity, sometimes we have to bite our tongues when children pick an unexpected color or combine things in a non-traditional way. Adults like things that "fit" and are predictable. Green trees, rectangular houses, glue under the pictures instead of smeared on top of them... but controlling those choices makes a child feel less capable, maybe even "wrong."

We can learn a lesson from the Harry Chapin lyrics recalling the conversation between a non-creative teacher and her exploring student artist, "Flowers are red... no use in seeing flowers any other way than the way they always have been seen.' ... 'But there are so many colors in a rainbow, ... so many colors in a flower, so let's use everyone.'"

As much as we try to encourage creativity, sometimes children balk. They don't want to get messy, or they want you to tell them what to draw or build or do to solve a fight. Try not to step in and do something for them. Instead help them break down the game/task. "Let's see what you were thinking about. What kind of bear do you want? Let's start with the body..." Reassure them that hands can be cleaned and that if something doesn't work out the first time, there are plenty of supplies to start over or try again. With this encouragement children have the freedom to explore.

Who knows, that blossoming creativity may position them to be a future peace negotiator, renowned architect, or the inventor of the cure for AIDS.

Now that your child is exercising their creativity muscle, there's only one thing left to do—figure out something different to do with potatoes tonight for supper!

Mushroom Tips and Ideas

- For best results, keep mushrooms dry and refrigerated; never soak mushrooms or store them in plastic bags.
- Don't wash, rinse or clean mushrooms until ready to use.
- Don't scrub or peel mushrooms before serving; you may trim the stem end if it's dry.
- To clean, use a soft vegetable brush or gently wipe with a damp cloth. Or, rinse quickly with cold water; immediately pat dry with paper towels.
- When grilling portabella mushrooms, season them with olive oil, lemon juice and salt and pepper; then place them on the grill stemside down. Turn them once and brush stem-side with herbed butter. Delicious!
- Mushrooms make great kabobs, just marinate with bottled Italian dressing or teriyaki sauce. Thread them on a skewer, salt and pepper to taste, and grill.

Vacation Imperative For Farmers

JINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

EAST BERLIN (Adams Co.) — Kevin Holtzinger may still get up at 4 a.m. when he's on vacation, but instead of milking cows he watches old movies on television or catches up on reading.

His wife, Karen Holtzinger, and the couple's six children have no problem with sleeping in and are quick to point that out to him when he questions where they've been.

Away from the hectic pace of a dairy farm and daily family responsibilities, the couple believes everyone needs some vacation time to rejuvenate "and get excited about what they're doing."

The Holtzingers and their children, Ashton, 17; Shannon, 16; Christine, 15; Laura, 5; Travis 4; and Paula, who will be 3 in August, usually go to a large cabin at Raystown Lake in Huntingdon County for one week every summer.

With the 24-hour daily responsibilities of a dairy farm how do they do it and why is it so important to them?

Kevin explains that having good employees is imperative.

On Ke-Holtz Dairy, which is located about three miles west of East Berlin along Route 234, the Holtzingers have seven full-time employees and one part-time person in addition to family members to care for 310 mature Holsteins, 260 young stock and 700 acres of land, a lot of it double-cropped.

While the teenagers in the family are all able students at Bermudian Springs High School and are very active in sports — Shannon recently brought home trophies from the state PIAA track meet for her jumping skills and is well-known in the area for her basketball expertise, Ashton is a top-notch soccer player, and Cristine is also excelling in soccer — they still have chores on the farm.

Kevin, former president of the Adams County Holstein Club and a state director of the Pennsylvania Holstein Club, said he believes that his children should learn a strong work ethic and notes that when they come home and complain about how much work they've already done by going to school and practicing sports, he reminds them "they still have chores."

Karen adds, "We all pitch in where we're needed."

But Kevin and Karen also believe the families and employees deserve a vacation.

"We try to make sure that everybody after they're here one year, everybody gets a week's (paid) vacation. We just thinks it's real important that you get a little time away," Kevin said.

Preparing for vacation at the time of the interview, Kevin said, "We're pushing very hard to get a lot of the extras done this week so employees don't have an over abundance of work next week. And we're only a phone call away (at Raystown), but they know, don't call unless it's an emergency."

Noting that the farm is seldom off his mind when he's away, Kevin adds, "We'll touch base a couple of times a week."

Karen adds that vacation is as important to a farm family as any other family adding that "Dairy farmers work seven days a week, 365 days a year, and he (Kevin) could schedule a day off, but there are still cows to breed and the tractor gets a flat tire, so he's still out there. Everyone needs time off to refocus and gets excited again about what you're doing."

She continues that this time away from the farm also gives Kevin some "one-on-one time" with his children.

Larry A. Swartz, Adams County Extension agent-dairy/agronomy, concurs with the Holtzingers that farmers need vacations and urges those he talks with to fit it into their schedule.

"Recently I read an article about a person who stated he had not missed a milking in 13 years. I assume he was somewhat proud of that fact; however, if you would have asked the cows, they probably could have cared less who did the milking.

"Are you one of those persons who feels your dairy cannot function without you, or that all your cows will get mastitis if someone else milks them? Well, guess again!"

Swartz recommends taking time away from the dairy is "a great investment in yourself and your business."

"Even an afternoon away from the dairy can be a great time for a family get together. Taking a break from the daily chores can provide you with some time to think about the future of your business and you will come back to work refreshed and reenergized," he said.

Continuing, Schwartz said, "If you say that you cannot afford to hire some help, you probably can't afford not to take a break. Also, if you cannot leave your employees in charge for a few days, then you don't have much in the way of quality employees. If you need assistance, there are always people willing to do relief milking."

He admits that a farmer with 40 cows might find setting aside time for a vacation more of a challenge, but with some thought ahead it's possible.

Swartz concludes, "I have never read a farmer's obituary that stated how many years they milked without taking a break for themselves and their family."

Marinating Tips

- Marinate meats in a large, plastic food storage bag, turning over occasionally for superior flavor penetration and easy cleanup.
- Trim excess fat from meat to prevent flare-ups while grilling (also a great calorie saver).
- Brush thick, bottled teriyaki baste and glaze on meats during the last 10 minutes of cooking to add flavor, moistness and color.
- For the easiest dinner around, marinate boneless chicken breasts, pork tenderloins or portabella mushrooms in bottled teriyaki marinade and sauce for 30 minutes, then grill and you're done!
- Keep a spray bottle of your favorite marinade or teriyaki sauce handy. Spritz your meat, fish or even vegetables before they go on the grill as a quick and easy way to add oodles of flavor.

Fest Highlights Herbs Many Uses

JINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Lavender took center stage at the first-ever Pennsylvania Herb Festival on June 26 at the York Expo Center — after all it is the 1999 Herb of the Year — but the many other herbs on display were also getting lots of attention.

Sixty vendors displayed and sold products made from herbs, in addition to the herb plants, and eight speakers presented information on various topics pertaining to herbs.

Barbara Steele of Alloway Creek Gardens & Herb Farm, 456 Mud College Road, Littlestown, spoke first.

She asked the capacity crowd how many raised lavender and nearly all hands went up indicating the popularity of the plant. While she noted that most people plant English lavender, some hardy and others tender perennials — these are hardy further south of Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Lavender is a sun-loving plant that prefers well-drained soils. Blooms ranging from white to blue to pink, its foliage can be gray or green.

Steele noted that lavender likes "just a dusting of lime" every now and again and urges that if you are going to trim your lavender do it in late winter or early spring and then just cut out the woody stems.

Among the other speakers were Susanna Reppert Brill, who discussed rosemary; Maryanne Schwartz, who spoke about making herbal soap; Nancy Ketner presented the backyard herbal pharmacy; Chef George Keeney offered herbs on the grill; Geraldine DePaula presented aromatherapy; Don Haynie designed dried herbal arrangements; and Delores

Lance Whitmire, 10, of Etters, York County, shows off a strand of lavendar beads he made at the York County 4-H stand. The 4-H club provided activities for youngsters who attended the 1st Pennsylvania Herb Festival at York Expo Center on June 26.

Kirshner offered tea herbs and blends.

Jackie LeRoy and Beth Thomason of Thomason's Old Thyme Herb Farm located at 170 Stoney Point Road, East Berlin, were on hand offering herbs as well as unique gardening items and plant markers. Barbara lives where the shop is located on what she calls "a farmette." She grows the herbs she sells.

At the festival Barbara and business associate presented samples of their dip mixes and visitors did the tasting.

Barbara said the two women present lectures and classes on herbs and their uses, and recently prepared an herbal wedding.

At another stand, Weeds Studio and Shop of Carlisle, Kirk Baney took time to explain that he makes paper the way it was made for centuries, noting that the process is very relaxing.

He and his partner, Terry Kozak, have been making paper for two years and just recently opened their shop. Among the many items they create are customized lamp shades and invitations.

With lavender in the spotlight the following recipes were available from "Lavender" by Tessa Eveleigh.

LAVENDER HEART COOKIES

1/2 cup unsalted butter, softened
1-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons superfine sugar for sprinkling
1/4 cup superfine sugar
2 tablespoons fresh lavender floretts or 1 tablespoon dried culinary lavender, roughly chopped.

Cream the butter and sugar together until fluffy. Stir in the flour and lavender and bring the mixture together in a soft ball. Cover and chill for 15 minutes.

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Roll out the dough on a lightly floured surface and stamp out about 18 cookies, using a 2-inch heart-shaped cutter. Place on a heavy baking sheet and bale for about 10 minutes or until golden.

Leave the cookies standing for about 5 minutes to set up. Using a metal spatula, transfer them carefully from the baking sheet onto a wire rack to cool completely. You can store them in an airtight container for up to 1 week.

COLD CARROT AND TOMATO SOUP WITH FRESH DILL

3 pounds fresh, ripe tomatoes
2 onions, coarsely chopped
6 carrots, coarsely shredded
4 cups rich chicken stock
3 tablespoons minced fresh dill
Sour cream
3 tablespoons unsalted, butter
2 shallots, coarsely chopped
2 russet potatoes, peeled and coarsely chopped
Salt/pepper to taste
Fresh dill sprigs for garnish

Blanch tomatoes in boiling water for 1 minute to loosen skins. Pell and coarsely chop. In a large saucepan, melt butter over medium heat. Add onions, shallots and carrots. Saute for 5 minutes.

Add potatoes and chicken stock; simmer, covered for 10 minutes. Add tomatoes and continue to cook, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking for 15 minutes.

Puree in batches in a food processor or blender. Return to saucepan and add dill, salt and pepper. Simmer for 5 minutes. Chill for several hours. Serve cold with a dollop of sour cream and a sprig of fresh dill. Serves 6.

HONEYDEW-CHERVIL SORBET

Dissolve 1/3 cup sugar into 1 cup boiling water. Allow to cool. Combine sugar mixture with 1 large honeydew melon, 1/4 cup packed chervil, and 1 egg white.

Puree in food processor. Partially freeze, add 1 cup white wine and continue freezing.

Kirk Baney stands behind some of the paper products that are available in Weeds Studio and Shop located in Carlisle. Baney owns the shop with Terry Kozak. The two have been making handmade paper for several years.

LAVENDER CAKE

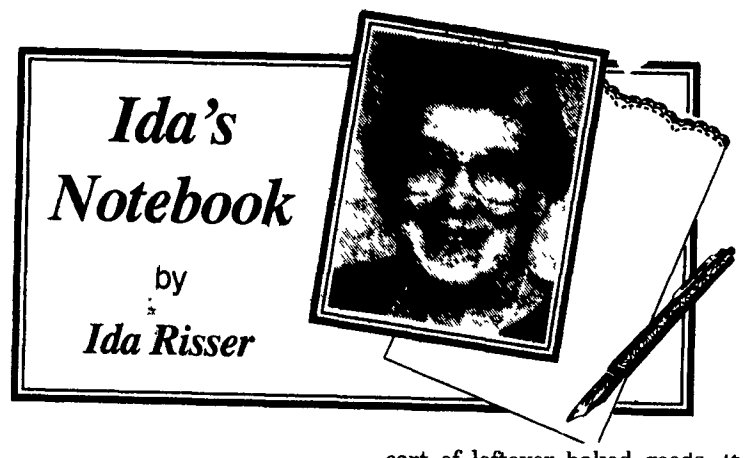
3/4 cup unsalted butter, softened
3 eggs, lightly beaten
1 tablespoon fresh lavender florets or 1 tablespoon dried culinary lavender, roughly chopped
1/2 teaspoon water
3/4 cup superfine sugar
1-1/2 cups self-rising flour, sifted
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 tablespoons milk
1/2 cup confectioners' sugar, sifted
a few fresh lavender florets for decoration

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly grease and flour a ring-bundt pan or a deep 8-inch round, loose bottomed cake pan. Cream the butter and sugar together thoroughly until light and fluffy. Add the eggs one at a time, beating thoroughly between each addition, until the mixture becomes thick and glossy. Fold in the flour, lavender florets, vanilla extract and milk.

Spoon the mixture into the pan and bake for 1 hour. Let sit 5 minutes, then turn onto a wire rack to cool. Pour over the cake and decorate with fresh lavender florets.

Beth Thomason provided the following recipe using a variety of herbs.

Suzanne Mease of York samples an herb dip at the Thomason's Old Thyme Herb Farm, which is located near East Berlin. Beth Thomason and Jackie LeRoy manned the stand at the Pennsylvania Herb Festival at York Expo Center selling a variety of herbs, seasonings, dip mixes, and many other items.



Recently I had a different experience in the grocery store, and that got me to thinking of many things connected with the buying of food.

My mother told me that over the more than 50 years of married life she and my father never spent more than two or three dollars a week on groceries. They grew their food or simply did not eat a great variety. In later years, when I was my mother's main method of transportation, she bought bread, bananas, sweet potatoes, and scrapple each week when I took her to the store.

My mother-in-law liked apricots and pineapples but told me she only ate them once or twice a year so they would remain "special." I guess we all have our likes and dislikes, which become more pronounced as we grow older.

When our children were all at home, I sometimes bought a big cart of leftover baked goods. It was possible to get a loaded cart of bread and pastries for a dollar if you were at the store early on Monday morning. Occasionally, a lady who lived nearby was able to go to the store for me, and then I would fill a freezer shelf with baked goods.

One day at the store, I could not find the raisins and before I realized it, our three-year-old ran away down the aisle to find a clerk and ask where the raisins were located. She was a precocious child. Another child continually begged for grapes, which I am sorry to say that I never bought for her as I thought they were too expensive.

But back to what I saw in the store last week—a man with a cell telephone was conversing with his wife as he walked up and down the produce aisles. He described the pears he saw and she told him which ones to buy. That was a first.

Mercer County Dairy Princess Likes What She Promotes

SANDY BRADLEY
Mercer Co. Correspondent

GROVE CITY (Mercer Co.) — In her competition skit, dairy princess contestant Katie Hanna portrayed a senior citizen testifying to the benefits of drinking milk. "Even though I didn't appreciate all that calcium then," she reflected on stage, "my bones, teeth, and muscles sure appreciate it now. And you can tell, because I'm still drinking milk from a cup — not putting my teeth in one!"

As newly-elected royalty for Mercer County, Katie is ready, she says, to sink her teeth into much, much more — eager to meet the challenges that come with her crown. In addition to writing a variety of articles and speaking to both farm and non-farm groups about the industry, as dairy princess Katie will participate in promotional activities on the radio as well as in schools, store, fairs, and parades.

But for this 16-year-old high school student, juggling a busy schedule is already part of a lifestyle filled with responsibility and achievement. As well as working five days a week in Greenville, where she milks cows and performs calf and heifer chores on the Leisure Lane Dairy Farm, Katie serves as president of the 4-H No-Bull Dairy Club, president of Lakeview Bible Club, circulations editor for her high school newspaper, president of the school show choir, and peer mediator at Lakeview High, where she is about to enter her senior year.

Katie also serves on the board of directors for Students for Charity, plays the flute and tuba, and belongs to a variety of groups that include her school cross country team, chorus, chambers ensemble, women's ensemble, marching band, concert band, pep band, brass ensemble, and Sandy Lake Wesleyan Church. In addition, Katie belongs to the National Honor Society and is listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

To be eligible to run for dairy princess, Katie explains, Mercer County contestants must either have parents who work in the dairy industry, be employed on a farm, belong to 4-H and own at least two dairy animals, or have served for a year as a dairy maid. Qualifying was easy, she says, since she has met all, instead of one, of the listed requirements.

Although her exposure to the dairy industry began at home, with a father who has worked on various farms, Katie's influences also included her aunt and uncle, Tammy and Tim Hanna, who own and operate Hanna Dairy Farm in Fredonia. Tammy, who has also participated in the dairy princess program for many years, was probably responsible for Katie's early involvement, which began at age eight, when the little girls' program began in Mercer.

"This is my ninth year in the program," she explains. "I've been a Dairy Darling, a Dairy Delight, a Delightful Dairy Daughter, and a Dairy Maid. After the first year I was hooked, and that was my dream: to be the pretty girl with the crown. I'm pretty excited. I've waited a long time."

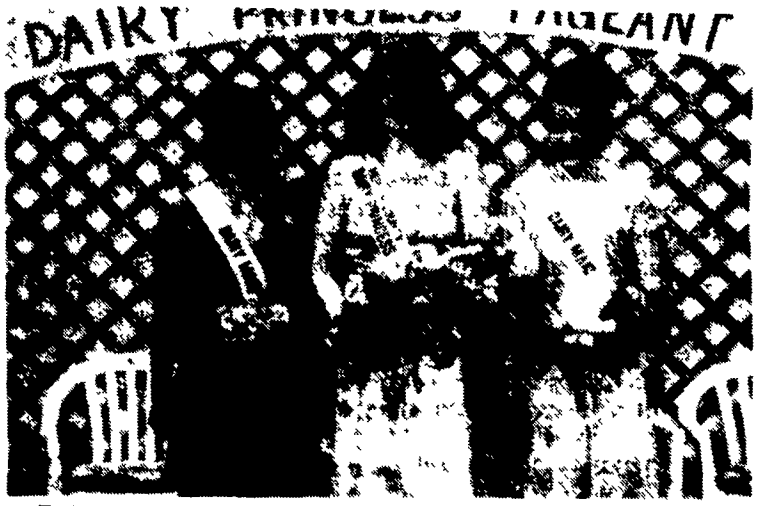
With hobbies that include meeting new people and working with animals, Katie said she expects to excel in her role as dairy princess. Also, she said, since her duties will include presentations to people in various settings, the coming year will help her develop those skills so necessary for success in business and marketing — two of her current professional interests.

"It's going to be a lot of fun," she says. "I also think it's going to be a lot of work, but I'm looking forward to it." As far as the marketing aspects of the job, Katie says she realizes that, in order to effectively promote a product or idea, the presenter has to be a believer. "I believe you have to like what you're promoting in order for it to go over well. If you don't like something, you're not going to do a good job of promoting it."



Dairy Maids Crystal Robinson and Miranda Moore are following in the steps of Mercer County Dairy Princess Katie Hanna, who is a former dairy maid and has been in the dairy promotion program for nine years.

Luckily, dairy products — ice cream in particular — rank among Katie's favorite foods. At the moment, her preferred varieties include an Eddy's limited Girl Scout edition, which is flavored with thin mints.

Katie Hanna tells flower presenters Sarah Slater and Sarah Patterson that her dream to become dairy princess began when she was a little girl.

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — Susanna Thomas of Bowsell won the Somerset County Dairy Princess title when the pageant was held at the Berlin-Brothersvalley High School on June 26.

As Snow White, her skit was concluded with advice to all the dwarfs and others listening in on the conversation.

"Always drink milk and you'll be ready to face the world," she said following a statistics report about cheese varieties, the number of dairy cows in Somerset County, and the number of stomachs a cow has.

The daughter of Mark G. and Doris E. Thomas, Susanna will be a junior at the Conemaugh Township Area High School.

When she participates next year on the student council, in forensics and marching band, the teen-ager will have many opportunities to give her peers the healthy dairy message and to encourage them to make milk the drink of choice.

She hopes to attend the Great Johnstown Career and Technology Center to study horticulture and hydroponics before entering college to major in agribusiness.

Her predecessor was Melissa Powell of Meyersdale who also did the coronation.

In addition to a scholarship of $1,000 Susanna received a $200 cash gift from the Allied Milk Producer's Cooperative, Inc. After 75 percent of the dairy princess requirements have been met, Allied will present $300 in additional funds to the princess.

During the on-stage interview Juliana reported that the cow's rear end is the most important part since it is where the babies come out and critical to the continuation of the species.

At Shanksville-Stoneycreek High School she will be a senior and participates in a long list of activities.

The dairy maids delivered door prizes at intervals during the pageant after Becky Ray, Powell's alternate, called names of winners.

They are Rebekah Fox, Cassie Hay, Cassandra Knepper, Wendy Mast, Nicole Powell, and Bethany Weimer.

USA Safe Night Holds Local Celebrations

DAVID HIEBERT
Westmoreland Co.
Correspondent

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — The local edition of the national event called "Safe Night USA" featured a rap artist/health educator from Philadelphia and local groups. Rap artist Sterlen Barr involved the audience in his performance and brought a strong personal message against using tobacco.

"The tobacco companies have lied to us" he said. "They try to make you think smoking is grown up, fun and sexy. What you don't see is yellow teeth, or people hooked up to a lung machine."

In addition to the anti-tobacco/drug message, "Safe Night USA" educates on the principles of conflict resolution to help youth handle arguments. And to avoid what the Center for Disease Control has identified as a threat to children's health, the program declares, "No guns."

The Greensburg edition was one of hundreds of local events on June 5, called Safe Night USA. The evening emphasized three rules for having a safe night:

- no weapons
- no drugs or alcohol
- no arguments

Begun in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, the safe night concept emphasizes that parents and youth can work together to make their communities safe and that it is fun to come together with others. The target age is appropriate for the strong anti-smoking message: According to health educator Sterlen Barr, youth are viewed by the tobacco industry as the "replacement smokers." And the industry spends $6.2 billion in advertising, 90% which goes into the top "youth" brands: Marlboro, Newport and Camel.

Barr also noted that the three top causes of preventable death in the United States center around the use of legal drugs: 1. Smoking and chewing snuff. 2. Drinking alcohol. 3. Second hand smoke. Barr also noted that if a person can graduate from high school without becoming a user, they probably would stay tobacco-free for life.

The national broadcast on PBS and a number of smaller cable networks featured the originator of the safe night idea from Milwaukee, Olusegun "Olu" Sijuwade, Safe Night Founder. Part of what he said included: "Safe Night USA, it's not just a one night event. Make it happen and keep it going."

And Sijuwade has proven that safe night can work. From his position as a former police officer, he and the Safe Nights in Milwaukee, Wisconsin have been credited as a key factor in a 60 percent drop in juvenile homicide. The Wisconsin Safe Night on November 15, 1996 had more than 100 Safe Nights in both urban and rural communities all across the state.

On the "Living Proof" web page, many testified to the effective results of Safe Nights on their lives, such as Gavin Hoesly, student and Safe Night participant who says: "I used to be a couch potato, but Safe Night gave me the chance to see my friends and have a lot of fun." or Dr. Bill Bartlett, retired pediatrician, member of the American Academy of Pediatrics who says "Safe Night USA is an opportunity to provide our youth with positive alternatives to violence and substance abuse."

The Safe Night USA broadcast on June 5 (9 p.m.) on PBS (Public Broadcasting System) and BET (Black Entertainment Television). The national event united youth and Safe Night planners in one multimedia celebration. The live show included all the elements of a Safe Night—the three rules, an educational component, and good clean fun.

In the broadcast, celebrities who have made it big in the entertainment industry, those will on their way to stardom and others who are part of the solution paid tribute to America's young people and Safe Night planners across the country. They helped teach conflict resolution, sing and add comedy to the hour-long show.

The celebrity line-up included some of the following:

Wayne Brady of ABC's Whose Line Is It Anyway?

Doug E. Doug of CBS' acclaimed Cosby Adimu of BET's award-winning show Teen Summit;

Actor Benito Martinez from the movie Outbreak;

Award-winning vocalist Crystal Lewis;

New recording artist Morley Kamen;

Naughty by Nature – Rap Music's Favorite Trio, Hip-Hop Artists;

The Mixed Generation "Mixed G" – Recording Artists, Conflict Resolution Facilitators;

No Authority, Recording Artists.

The broadcast originated from three major hubs: BET studios in Washington, DC; Church of the Harvest in Los Angeles; Milwaukee Auditorium, Milwaukee, Wisconsin where Safe Night began.

Three live Safe Night parties served as a backdrops for the television show, plus the cameras dropped in on Safe Night parties in Miami; Detroit; Shelton, Washington, near Seattle; and Paducah, Kentucky.

Making A Difference

Here are three short stories profiling people and programs making a difference in their communities. Each story relates to one of the three Safe Night rules:

• No Weapons: In Santa Fe, New Mexico, Victor "Tito" Rivera has turned a life of gangs and violence into one of mentoring and caring for kids at risk.

• No Alcohol or Drugs: New York City. Scot Anthony Robinson, an actor and former drug and alcohol abuser, now carries his message of hope to young people through a drug prevention program.

• No Arguments: Elementary, middle and high schools in the seaport town of Newport, Oregon, teach peer mediation and conflict resolution training. On the national broadcast, students shared their experiences and responses to the program.

The Safe Night USA theme song and public service announcements are available for download from the Safe Night USA web site at the following address: http://www.pbs.org/safenight/plan.htm

Some Samples from the world wide web message board

In addition to the suggestions for planning and testimonials, the PBS web site provided an opportunity for planners to get help for specific problems or ask advice. Here is a sample of some of that dialogue:

Gail Boothe (weboothe@aol.com) from the Nevada Community Resource center asked on Friday, May 21, about security for their local event. She said: "I am organizing a safe night in Nevada, Iowa. I am curious about how other small communities are handling security. We have had bomb threats at the school and I am concerned that "Safe Night" is like a challenge for some kids to try and make it not a safe night. I'd love suggestions." Several people responded with ideas.

On a similar note, Jennifer Young (naprc@fullnet.net) from the Norman Area Prevention Resource Center asked on April 19: "I work in a rural area school and I targeted middle school age (grades 6-8).

Jeff Sarault, Cindy Arblaster, and Sterlen Barr confer prior to the "Safe Night USA" event in Greensburg. Jeff, a 4-H member from Westmoreland County, has gone professional with his entertainment services and provides music for weddings and dances. Cindy Arblaster is the extension agent for Youth in Westmoreland County, and Sterlen is a health educator from Southeastern, PA. Photo by David Hiebert.

Extra Vitamin E Helps Young Pigs Survive Weaning

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Producers frequently stumped by the sudden death of a seemingly healthy and rapidly growing young pigs should consider the lack of vitamin E as a suspect, said Ohio State University animal scientist Don Mahan.

Vitamin E serves as an antioxidant in pigs, protecting cell tissue from damage from free oxygen generated during metabolism. If a pig is vitamin E deficient, muscle, liver and other tissue will begin to break down and can result in the animal's death.

"When a pig is born it's already deficient in vitamin E because a minimal amount of the fat-soluble products that contain vitamin E can transfer through the placenta of the sow during pregnancy," Mahan said. "After birth, the young pigs get their vitamin E from the colostrum and milk of the sow. If the sow has low body stores or is fed low dietary levels of vitamin E, then the young pig also will be low in vitamin E when it is removed from the sow during weaning."

The blood and tissue vitamin E concentrations of pigs decline fairly dramatically during weaning, so that is the phase where a pig is most susceptible to vitamin E deficiency problems, he said. About 2 percent of young pigs die during this postweaning period because of low levels of vitamin E received from the sow or selenium — an element that serves a similar purpose as vitamin E in a pig's body.

Mahan and other Ohio State University researchers have studied the effects of vitamin E and selenium deficiencies in pigs for nearly 10 years. He, Ohio State postdoctoral student Ivan Moreira, and Ohio State graduate research associates San Ching and Ted Wiseman recently began looking at ways to correct low vitamin E levels in young weaned pigs.

Wiseman presented the results of their research at the American Society of Animal Science and American Dairy Science Association Midwest Sectional meeting in Des Moines, Iowa, March 15-17.

"We decided to correct the problem by adding vitamin E to the diets or drinking water of two-week-old weaned pigs," Mahan said. "Previous research showed that when vitamin E is added to a diet, the serum values of vitamin E in a pig's blood did not increase much until a couple weeks after weaning. So we decided to add various grades of vitamin E up to some very high levels to see what amount of vitamin E added to the diet or drinking water would raise vitamin E blood serum up to its necessary level within a pig."

The National Research Council recommends a pig's diet contain 16 international units (IU) of vitamin E per kilogram (kg) of diet. The dietary levels the Ohio State researchers studied were 0, 20, 40, 60, 80, 100, 150 and 200 IU per kg of feed. They found it took almost 80 IU per kg of vitamin E in the weaned pigs' diets to get blood serum values that would prevent a deficiency.

For drinking water, increases of 0, 55, 110, 220 and 440 IU per liter of water were studied. It took the addition of almost 100 IU per liter of water to get good vitamin E blood serum values, Mahan said.

"We looked at drinking water because even though a pig may not be eating well, generally it will always consume water," he said. "The diet and drinking water values we found that resulted in appropriate vitamin E blood serum levels were both much higher than what the NRC has established for dietary requirements."

Feed companies could use this information to increase the amount of Vitamin E added to their products, Mahan said. It could help veterinarians who recommend injections and suggest feed requirements to producers. Producers also could add vitamin E to the drinking water of their young pigs if they suspect a vitamin E deficiency.

All grains fed to pigs generally have a low vitamin E content, so finding animals low in vitamin E can be common, he said. Vitamin E is found in the oil of feed crops, so soybeans generally have higher levels of the vitamin. But, vitamin E can be destroyed easily when exposed to air, reducing effective levels in feeds.

The Ohio State University research was partially sponsored by BASF, a vitamin manufacturer.

For more information about vitamin E and its effects on pigs, interested people should contact Mahan at (614) 292-6987.

Spectacular Vistas, Acres Of Sheep High Points Of Student Trip

NEWARK, Del. — "Since I've been back from New Zealand, the first thing I tell people is that they have to put New Zealand on their 'future destinations' list," said Kari Peter, a senior entomology and plant pathology major.

She was one of 39 students who spent Winter Session "down under," learning about the diverse agriculture of New Zealand.

The session was co-sponsored by the department of animal and food sciences and the department of food and resource economics at the University of Delaware, along with UD's office of International Programs and Special Sessions. Lincoln University, near the city of Christchurch on New Zealand's South Island, served as the host institution and home base for the students during their four-week stay.

While in New Zealand, the students spent four mornings a week attending lectures for the two courses offered during the session: Beef Cattle and Sheep Production (ANSC 471) and Records and Accounts (FREC 201). Much of the remaining time was devoted to field trips and excursions that provided a comprehensive look at agricultural practices in New Zealand as well as some of the country's most breathtaking scenery.

Dr. Lesa Griffiths, associate dean for academic programs and associate professor of animal science, led the study trip. According to Griffiths, most of New Zealand's 68 million sheep and 2 million cattle are raised entirely out-of-doors.

"The lack of barns or other structures was one of the most obvious differences in the way livestock is raised in New Zealand," she said. "Instead, the open fields would be lined by dense stands of trees — called shelter belts — where the animals could find shelter when needed."

Wool sheds for shearing sheep were the primary structures found at many of the farms on the itinerary. The students were treated to sheep shearing and sheep dog demonstrations on several occasions. As the dogs worked to herd the sheep into the sheds, professional shearers removed the wool of each animal in 30 seconds. At one farm, Acheron Station, one farmer and 10 dogs were able to manage 5,500 sheep on 22,000 acres. The farms featured on the tour represented a full spectrum of New Zealand geography, from the high-country Acheron Station to lowland farms, both arid and irrigated.

"Another interesting aspect of the farms we visited was their diversification," said Griffiths. "For example, in addition to raising livestock, many of the farmers found additional income through water sports such as water skiing or whitewater rafting. In fact, the rafting trip our students took during our visit to the Mount Peel Station was probably the high point of the trip for many of them."

European red deer were another source of diversity on many farms. The deer are raised both for their meat and for the velvet from their antlers. Sold in Asian markets, the velvet brings in five to 10 times the income of the venison.

"We also saw American elk, which are kept for cross-breeding purposes because of their large antlers," adds Griffiths.

Other agricultural sites visited by the students included a beef feedlot adjacent to the Pacific Ocean that was in compliance with New Zealand's strict environmental regulations and the largest equestrian breeding facility on the South Island. Also toured was a farm that demonstrated the concept of "share milking," in which a farmer who owns the land and facilities and a tenant who owns the dairy cattle split the profits from the milk produced.

Beyond the agricultural aspects of the trip, the friendliness and culture of the New Zealanders also made a deep impression on the students. Many formed close bonds with the New Zealanders on campus during their stay.

"The Kiwis were incredibly laid back and friendly," said Jason Irwin, a junior animal science major. "The entire way of life in New Zealand makes me want to move there permanently."

Another highlight of the trip was the evening spent at a Marae, a Maori village. After a traditional "hangi" — a meal cooked underground — the students were guests at a concert of native music and dancing. The students also spent a day at the annual heritage festival in the coastal French settlement of Akaroa. A boat tour of the town's harbor included an opportunity to swim with the harbor's resident dolphins.

Six students enrolled in honors sections for the season were assigned to produce a video documentary of the trip.

"We took the camera everywhere," said Sara Sharp, a junior animal science major. "We interviewed everyone on the trip and some of the locals, too, and got hours and hours of video. Now we're in the process of editing it down to just one hour."

Remembering the turquoise ocean and incredible variety of the landscape, she said. "I think New Zealand is the most beautiful place I'll ever see!"

Peter echoed those sentiments when she said, "My New Zealand experience surpassed all my expectations, and then some. I can honestly say I've never packed so many activities into 30 days."

Peter, who also studied in Costa Rica during Winter Session 1998, said she believes international study is invaluable.

"Not only do you get to go somewhere much cheaper than it would be for a regular traveler, but you also learn and gain much more than if you went to these places for just a vacation. I made some great new friends on this trip and had an adventure of a lifetime!"

DES MOINES, Iowa — Producers searching for insights into the best management practices for crops with today's technology traits can find such information in the Pioneer Agronomy Research Update available from Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., through Pioneer sales professionals.

The 12-page booklet provides a summary of crop management research projects conducted across the Corn Belt by Pioneeer's Agronomy Sciences research team.

Recommendations cover managing TC Blend high oil corn, plant populations for maximum corn yield potential, better ways to utilize yield monitors and mapping systems, use of variable seeding technologies, the influence of nitrogen on soybean yield and others.

"More and more producers are adopting products that offer enhanced nutrition, insect or herbicide resistance or combinations of these traits," said Paul Carter, agronomy sciences manager at Pioneer in Johnston, Iowa. "Pioneer's team of agronomists, entomologists, weed scientists and statistical specialists are committed to evaluating management practices and providing that information to growers to help them maximize their returns on every acre."

The streamlined, close-coupled design allows economical operation on tractors as small as 30 horsepower on the SE8 and 45 horsepower on the SE10 The 85 HP center gearbox and 60 HP outboard gearboxes are protected from sudden shockloads by a slip clutch on the main driveline and torque dampeners on the side driveshafts Pan blade carriers help the unit glide over field obstacles and updraft blades with a 4" blade overlap provide a clean cut

Meeting all your harvesting needs!

Leola, PA 17540 Phone: (717) 656-2321

Located: 4 miles West of New Holland on Rt. 23, 1 1/2 miles Northeast of Leola on the No. Groffdale Rd., 1 mile on the right, opposite Groffdale Mennonite Church.

Chopping quality is extremely important for silage and also digestion of the feed. Sharp knives and a precisely adjusted shearbar guarantee a clean cut and even crop flow. Four intake and precompression rollers – two upper and two lower rollers – compress the crop densely and transport it to the chopping cylinder. The latest generation of metal detectors is located in the lower front roller. The gearbox provides for 6 different chop lengths. The changeover between two lengths in each range can be done at the touch of a button. The impressive CLAAS chopping cylinder on all JAGUAR models is a full 29.5" wide with 24 knives in V-formation gives 28,800 cuts per minute. The shearbar is adjusted to the knives without tools. The result is ease of maintenance, with contact adjustment and a power saving cut, plus excellent forage quality.

The high quality of corn forage produced by the JAGUAR is derived from the CLAAS corn cracker. Two saw toothed rollers run at different speeds with 20% difference to open up virtually every kernel. This means good quality silage that is easily digested.

CHORE-TIME®

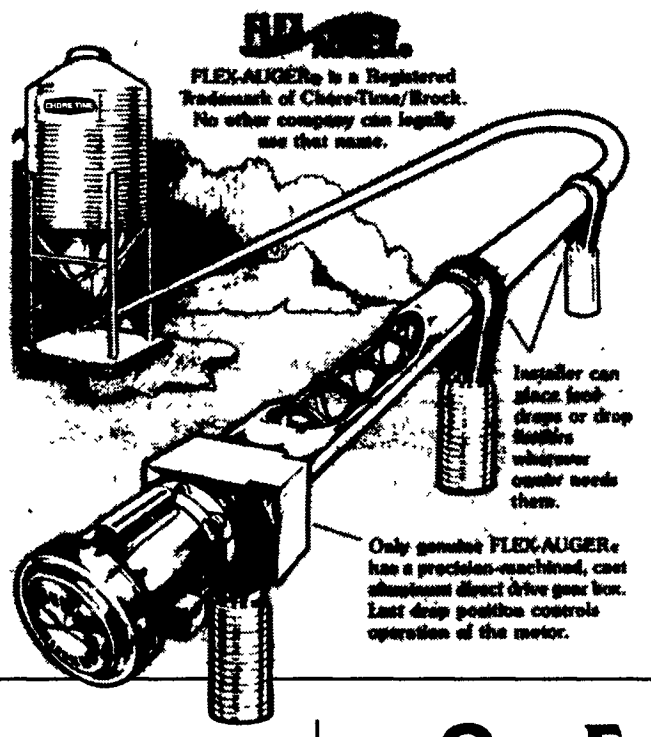
Hog Equipment Distributor

Chore-Time FLEX-AUGER®: the one and only

Don't be fooled. Chore-Time's FLEX-AUGER® Feed Delivery System has built a reputation as "The best way ever devised to deliver feed". It's so good, in fact, that several competitors are trying to imitate it.

Cheap Imitations. While it may be that imitation is "the sincerest form of flattery", we feel sorry for producers who call us about problems with what they thought was FLEX-AUGER®. Turns out it was a substitute somebody sold them real cheap when they thought they were buying genuine FLEX-AUGER®.

No Comparison. Others who have recently started trying to make a flexible auger aren't having much luck making a product as good as FLEX-AUGER®. Producers who buy these imitations have also come to this realization. This hardly comes as a surprise.



FLEX-AUGER® is a Registered Trademark of Chore-Time/Brock. No other company can legally use that name.
Installer can place feed drops or drop flexible whenever auger needs them.
Only genuine FLEX-AUGER® has a precision-machined, cast aluminum direct drive gear box. Limit drop position controls operation of the motor.

After all, we invented the idea of coreless, flexible auger 30 years ago. And, we've continued to improve it with important innovations and refinements nearly every year since to give you better value for your hard-earned dollar. Unfortunately imitators often miss the finer points of a product's successful performance - points only obtained through years of design and manufacturing experience.

Genuine Advantages. So, if you want all the advantages that only genuine FLEX-AUGER® can give you: flawless feed conveying, extreme auger durability, wear-resistant and ultraviolet-resistant tube, direct-drive power unit (not belts), and Chore-Time's iron-clad "no fooling" warranty - make sure you get the one with the genuine FLEX-AUGER® logo right on the tube.

Christopher P. Embry

John B. Stipe III

Two Earn Designation

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — RETTEW Associates, Inc. has announced that Christopher P. Embry, environmental scientist, and John B. Stipe III, assistant environment scientist, have earned the designation of nutrient management specialist (NMS) from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The department requires the NMS certification for those writing or approving nutrient management plans. The plans are required for concentrated animal operations (CAOs) in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

To receive the commercial NMS certification, a two-day precertification training course must be attended. A passing score must also be achieved on an examination having several competency areas. These areas include soil science and fertility, nutrient application and management, nutrients and water management, crop production, soil and manure testing and interpretation, fertilizer materials and their characteristics, design and implementation of best management practices (BMPs), environmental impacts associated with nutrient management, and commonwealth nutrient management regulations (Act 6).

Embry's and Stipe's experience includes electromagnetic surveys, Phase I and II environmental site assessments, risk assessments, geoprobe and soil investigations, groundwater sampling for both organic and inorganic parameters, storage tank investigations, preliminary nitrate assessments, and carbonate hazard assessments. They have supervised test drilling, and the installation of monitoring, production, and recovery wells.

Embry is a member of the National Groundwater Professionals and has a bachelor's degree in environmental science from Richard Stockton College, New Jersey. Stipe has a bachelor's degree in environmental resource management from Penn State.

He is a member of the Pennsylvania Association of Environmental Professionals (PAEP).

Case Announces Expanded Row Crop Cultivator Line

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation has announced a manufacturing agreement with Orthman Manufacturing, Inc., Lexington, Neb., to offer an expanded line of row crop cultivators that will help farmers maximize their productivity in a variety of conditions.

"We know that farmers evaluate various tillage options on their farms as they explore new ways to reduce costs and increase yields," said Keith Whitaker, Case marketing manager. "From conventional tillage to high residue conditions, there's now a Case IH row crop cultivator built for the job.

"Mechanical cultivation is an important practice for effective weed control," said Whitaker. "Case IH row crop cultivators offer both economic and agronomic crop-health advantages over many other weed control options. Mechanical cultivation is a low-cost strategy to address weed shifts and avoid build-up of herbicide resistance."

The new line includes:

• Case IH 1830 row crop cultivator — ideally suited for cultivation in conventional tillage operations.

• Case IH 2220 row crop cultivator — a new heavy-duty cultivator that can operate at high speeds, ideal for high production growers in high residue and other harsh conditions. A wide variety of sweep and attachment options are available, allowing the machine to be customized for additional duties.

• Case IH 2240 row crop cultivator — With exceptional strength and versatility, this new precision cultivator performs in conventional or heavy-residue no-till fields, providing fast and effective week kill. With appropriate attachments, it can also be used to create seedbeds for cotton and other crops.

Under the terms of the agreement, Orthman will assume production of all Case IH row crop cultivators. Orthman manufactures specialized row-crop tillage products including cultivators and other products for specialty tillage applications. Previously, Case IH row crop cultivators had been produced at Case's facility in Hamilton, Ontario.

Crop Protection Solutions Previewed At Novartis Field Day

HUDSON, N.Y. — Tree fruit and potato growers got a look at the future of disease and insect control recently when Novatis Crop Protection, Inc. shared the results of trials with two new products in development.

The growers attended a field day at a research farm Novartis operates near Hudson where Actara™ and Platinum™ insecticides, and Flint™ fungicide, are being tested.

Actara is being tested for foliar application in apples to control plum curculio, aphids, leafminers and leafhoppers, and in pears for control of pear psylla. In potatoes, both Actara and Platinum, a soil treatment formulation of the same active ingredient, are in development for control of Colorado potato beetle, aphids and potato leafhopper. In vegetables, Platinum and Actara are being tested for control of a broad spectrum of sucking and chewing insect pests, including aphids, flea beetles, whiteflies and Colorado potato beetles. Flint is being tested for control of foliar and fruit scab and other economically significant foliar diseases in apples and pears.

Actara and Platinum are formulations of a new generation neonicotinoid insecticide called thiamethoxam. Novartis researchers reviewed test results showing that thiamethoxam is highly effective at low use rates. The compound will fit well into integrated pest management programs, and has favorable crop, environmental and worker safety profiles.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has granted an expedited review of thiamethoxam and the compound will be reviewed concurrently in California and Canada. Novartis expects first registrations in 2000 for use in pome fruit, potatoes, tobacco, fruiting and leafy vegetables, cucurbits, cole crops and cotton. Additional registrations for use on grapes, wheat, strawberries and stone fruit are expected in subsequent years. Registrations in New York are expected within nine months of federal registrations.

Federal registration of Flint is expected in late July of this year on apples, pears, grapes, and cucurbits. Again, registration in New York is not expected until 2000. In pome fruit trials, Flint has provided excellent control of foliar and fruit scab, and other economically significant diseases.

Flint is expected to offer long-lasting control because of a unique feature Novartis scientists call mesostemic, or "locked in," activity. The researchers explained that the active ingredient in Flint, called trifloxystrobin, has a high affinity for the plant surface and is absorbed by the waxy layers of the plant. It redistributes at the plant surface by superficial vapor movement and redisposition. It also penetrates plant tissue with translaminar activity, but there is little or no movement within the vascular system of the plant. This locked-in activity combines key attributes of both protectant and systemic products for longer-lasting disease protection.

Flint has been designated as a Reduced Risk product by the EPA. It is highly compatible with IPM programs and is non-toxic to mammals, birds and bees.

Platinum™, a new, soil-applied insecticide from Novartis Crop Protection, delivered excellent control of Colorado potato beetle under heavy infestation pressure in tests at the company's Northeast Research Station. The June 25 field day previewed the company's new products for United Ag Products personnel and growers.

PACMA, Lakeville Announce Venture

PALMYRA (Lebanon Co.) — PACMA, and Lakeville Transfer Inc., located in Livonia, N.Y., have announced the formation of a joint venture between the two entities.

Under the agreement, PACMA, Inc. will assume the management and operation of Lakeville Transfer grain elevator at Lakeville, formally operated by Ag Network Inc. Les Cole, the majority owner and president of Lakeville Transfer, will continue in a consultant and advisory capacity, and in addition has been appointed as a director of PACMA's corporate board.

Richard Walthew will continue to manage the Lakeville elevator as he has since it was constructed in 1994. His staff will include his assistant Leslie White, and Jason Cole, operations manager. Gary Cordier, president of PACMA, Inc., has stated that the benefits of the joint venture will exceed the sum of the benefits derived by the two separate parties. Cordier believes that the degree of marketing ability and expanded marketing opportunities that PACMA will bring to the facility matches up perfectly with this modern, efficient elevator and Dick Walthew's experience in handling grain and the strong customer relationships he has developed in the New York state market.

This combination will greatly benefit the western New York farm community. The new entity will be known as Lakeville Grain Elevator, Division of PACMA.

Muchmore Joins White Oak Mills

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — White Oak Mills Inc. has announced the addition of Greg Muchmore, of State College, to its professional sales team.

Muchmore will serve as a district manager for White Oak Mills. His responsibilities will include working with and meeting the needs of producers in central Pennsylvania. In addition, he will help the company develop a feed dealer network by attracting and maintaining new dealer relationships.

Muchmore will help expand White Oak Mills' total animal feed business, which includes quality dairy, beef, horse, swine, poultry, and other livestock feeds.

"With more than 20 years of agribusiness experience, Greg is a qualified sales professional who will complement White Oak Mills' team," said Don Lloyd, White Oak Mills vice president of dairy.

"In an effort to serve more producers and expand our dealer network, White Oak Mills welcomes the opportunity to assist Greg with the expansion into central Pennsylvania. White Oak Mills has the resources and manufacturing flexibility to accommodate producers' and dealers' personalized needs, and Greg has the practical experience and skills to assist such customers," Lloyd said.

Greg Muchmore

Having been graduated from Pennsylvania State University with a bachelor of science degree in agricultural business management in 1976, Muchmore served as a district manager for Purina Mills, Camp Hill, for nine years. He also worked as an operations manager at Agway, East Berlin, and general manager of Agway, York, for more than 10 years.

MEDULLARY BONE AND EGGSHELL QUALITY

Dr. Roland M. Leach, Jr.
Professor of Avian Orthopaedics

Earlier this year Carol V. Gay discussed several problems associated with calcium metabolism in the laying hen. One subject that was mentioned briefly was the topic of medullary bone. We are now in the process of developing a research program to study this type of bone in more depth.

An anatomist discovered this tissue more than 60 years ago when he was studying bone metabolism in the pigeon. He observed that the female pigeon deposited bone in the marrow cavity of certain bones as she prepared to lay eggs. When she started to lay eggs, the bone slowly disappeared with each egg that was laid until the nest of eggs was complete. Later research with laying hens showed that the medullary bone remained throughout the production period. However, the cellular activity varied with the daily egg laying cycle. Research by Dr. W.J. Mueller at Penn State showed that medullary bone contributed between 30-40 percent of the calcium found in each eggshell. Thus, medullary bone is like a bank account — the hen borrows calcium when the egg is being calcified and pays it back when no shell is being formed.

As you can see, this is a fascinating process. It also raises a number of questions. For example, why is medullary bone, but not other bone, sensitive to the egg laying cycle? Secondly, if we could develop procedures to enhance medullary bone deposition, could we enhance and sustain eggshell quality? The only attempt to do this in the past year ended in disaster. It was thought that if pullets were fed high levels of calcium prior to coming into lay, bone disposition would be enhanced. Unfortunately, deposition of calcium in the kidney was enhanced leading to the formation of kidney stones. Therefore, we are looking at other ways that we could enhance medullary bone disposition. Because medullary bone has a much greater sensitivity when compared to the other types of bones, we are confident that this can be accomplished. This can be achieved by applying the tremendous amount of knowledge gained from osteoporosis research with humans. We will keep you posted on the progress of this research.

Krause To Give Away Commemorative Tandem Disc Harrow

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — In light of current commodity prices, it's not surprising that farmers throughout North America are looking for a way to reduce expenses.

Ironically, Krause Corporation is offering one lucky producer a way to save approximately $20,000 in machinery costs.

After 83 years in continuous business as a family-owned manufacturer of innovative farm equipment, Krause Corporation recently surpassed a historical milestone by building it 200,000th tillage unit. Now, as a way of involving the agricultural community in the celebration, the company is going to be giving it away in a drawing this fall.

To register for the 200,000th unit drawing — which is for a 24-foot-wide Model 3954WR Flex-Wing disc harrow, that has been outfitted with commemorative graphics and a special serial number plate — qualified individuals may fill out an entry form at any Krause equipment dealer or at any of the upcoming farm shows where Krause has a display. In addition, the commemorative disc harrow, along with a wide variety of Krause implements, will be on display at Hucker Harvest Days, the Ohio Farm Science Review, and the Farm Progress Show.

"We're proud to say that with 27 different series of agricultural tillage tools and grain drills, we currently have the largest offering of products of any short-line company in business," said Steve Krause, president of Krause Corporation and third-generation CEO. "However, even though we have become a leader in innovative tillage and planting equipment, we will continue to look for ways to enhance farmers' productivity and improve farm profits."

According to Krause, that's how it all began back in 1916. Like today's generation of the Krause engineers, his grandfather, Henry Krause, was looking for a better way to till the wheat stubble on his family farm in Meade County, Kansas. In the process, he developed the industry's first one-way plow. Unlike traditional disc plows, which had each disc blade mounted on a single standard, Krause's unique one-way plow used multiple discs mounted at an angle on a single tie rod. As a result, it was aggressive enough for primary tillage in wheat stubble, yet it left sufficient residue to protect topsoil from high winds.

By 1928, the demand for the company's one-way plow was so great that Krause bought a small windmill factory in Hutchinson, Kansas, and moved the operation to its present location. Despite hard times in the 1930s and 1940s, when the Depression and World War II hit the company with a one-two blow, Krause not only survived, but prospered.

By the 1960s, Krause had become a leader with yet another product — the tandem disc harrow. At the same time, the company was starting to build a reputation for its rugged line of chisel plows and field cultivators. Krause was also setting industry standards starting with the first high-residue chisel plow in 1962 and the first Flex-Wing hydraulic folding disc harrow in 1965.

Today, Krause Corporation continues to be a leader in tandem disc harrow production, with nine different series available. However, the company has become equally known for its combination tools that combine discing, field cultivation and finishing in a single pass. The 6300 Series Landstar and the 6150 Series Landsman XT are both designed for high-residue, minimum-till farming. Krause's growing fall tillage line includes the Landbuilder 4880 Series disc ripper, and the 4800 Series Landsaver and Landking coulter and disc chisels.

Other products in the current line include seedbed packers, chisels, field cultivators, row-crop cultivators and a wide offering of conventional and no-till grain drills — including the 5500 Series Pro-Air, which is the industry's first grain drill with vacuum metering.

Pa. Leads The Way In Egg Safety

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Despite the recent negative publicity about the safety of eggs in the American food supply, Pennsylvanians are in a unique and positive situation.

"The Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program can serve as a prototype for the egg industry in the development of egg quality assurance programs and the industry should adopt quality assurance programs based on the interventions developed in the Pennsylvania Pilot Program and used in the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program."

So says a 15-member Review Team Report prepared by the Federal Food and Drug Administration, Centers for Disease Control and the U.S. Department of Agriculture dated January 18, 1997.

The focus of legislative and regulatory activity now going on in Washington is designed to bring the federal government's egg safety standards up to those which have been in effect in Pennsylvania's eggs for several years.

Pennsylvania has the most intensely monitored salmonella enteritidis risk reduction program in the United States. The state is the fourth largest egg producing state in the nation and takes food safety very seriously, placing its money where the omelets are, so to speak.

Pennsylvania's consumer protection program for eggs has led the way for almost 10 years and now stands at the forefront of national standards through a program called PEQAP, the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program. This is a voluntary program administered by the PennAG Poultry Council, created by the egg industry, and monitored by the Department of Agriculture. The Department of Health serves as an advisor to the program and the FDA Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition provides additional support. The Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Laboratories at Penn State University, the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, and the Department of Agriculture provide laboratory testing of eggs and environmental samples.

The PEQAP guidelines cover egg production and assure the commitment of the producer to implement the best management and monitoring practices most likely to prevent salmonella enteritidis contamination. Basic measures include continuous environmental testing of layers and pullet houses, buying only SE-negative chicks, utilizing an intensively monitored rodent control program, and cleaning and disinfecting between flocks. Any positive eggs, eggs that are found to contain the salmonella enteritidis organism, are automatically diverted to a pasteurizing facility and then removed from the table egg market.

Consumers can recognize eggs produced under the most intensely monitored system by looking for the PEQAP symbol on each carton of eggs packed by participating companies.

New Holland Introduces Self-Propelled Forage Harvester

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The FX38, New Holland's newest self-propelled forage harvester, produces 414 gross horsepower for high-capacity chopping. The FX38 joins the 346-hp FX28 and 525-hp FX58 in the New Holland lineup of self-propelled forage harvesters.

The new Model FX38 is powered by a reliable, 6-cylinder, 13.8L, 414-hp New Holland diesel engine. It features a heavy-duty Length of Cut (LOC) gearbox with reinforced gearbox driveshaft to keep pace with high-capacity demands.

The FX's rugged, high-capacity cutterhead features beveled and reversible knives designed for efficient chopping. The cutterhead measures an extra-wide 30 inches to cut more crop and chop it more efficiently.

Reversible knives span the entire length of the 12-knife, 1,140 rpm cutterhead. The operator can select from four length of cut. The FX38 cutterhead offers 3/16-inch (4 mm), 1/8-inch (6 mm), 3/8-inch (9 mm) and 5/8-inch (15 mm) cut lengths.

In corn, these double-sided knives offer the best knife-to-shearbar angle and provide a consistently cleaner cut with less power. Additionally, an optional crop processor module can be easily removed or installed in the base unit for cracking kernels and crushing cobs.

All New Holland FX harvesters are designed with features that make chopping more convenient, like the Metalert III™ metal detector, Accucut™ knife-sharpening system and shearbar-setting system for fast, in-field sharpening, optional 4WD, and a spout that's easy to position and maneuver.

The comfortable, roomy cabs are best-in-class, with air-ride seats and lots of glare-free glass. Easy-to-use controls and information systems are right at the operator's fingertips.

GIVES YOU
OPTIONS IN FEEDING
Your Dairy Herd

Call us today for a feeding program built to fit your Dairy Herd and your Production Goals.

Because you needs may be different from your neighbor's, we adjust the following nutrients and ingredients to fit your needs and goals

- Amino Acids
- Protein
- By-Pass Protein
- Energy
- Fiber
- Calcium
- Phosphorus
- Salt
- Vitamins & Trace Minerals
- Organic Trace Minerals

FOUR SIMPLE STEPS TO SUCCESS

Farm For Profit Step 1

SOIL MANAGEMENT

ACHIEVE

- Contains nutrients and feeders which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

REMEDY

- Contains nutrients and micronutrients which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

TANK MIXING

STEP 2 PLANT NUTRITION & STEP 1

We have found be adding 12 8 oz of Remedy and a small amount of Achieve per acre to the recommended amount of Farm For Profit Step 2 True Solution Starter Fertilizer and applying directly on the seed or in the seed cradle we got outstanding results

Farm For Profit Step 2

PLANT NUTRITION

FARM FOR PROFIT TRUE SOLUTION STARTER FERTILIZER

- Near neutral pH
- 100% available
- Root zone placement
- Low salt index
- Foliar Feeding

Farm For Profit has established their own standard for quality Unlike many liquid fertilizers Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer is a solution It is not just particles suspended in liquid Each drop contains the exact N-P-K ratio of the standard formulation Farm For Profit liquid fertilizer is consistent and stable and won't settle out. It handles easily It can be stored indefinitely When it is applied, it flows evenly and cleanly Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer meets our standard for quality

VEGETABLE OIL

1 Encapsulates the chemical
2 Helps generate uniform droplet size
3 Greatly reduces chemical evaporation
4 Reduces chemical drift
5 Increases the coverage because of its spreading and sticking ability
6 Reduces chemical wash off
7 Gives you better control of the chemicals

One of Farm For Profit's main concerns is the level of soil and water pollution found today Our goal is to remove as much petroleum base material and farm chemical from the soil as possible Farm For Profit Step 3 Vegetable Oil gives us a means to reduce the level of both petroleum base materials and farm chemicals

Farm For Profit Step 4

TRAINED FIELD PERSONNEL

The Farm For Profit Authorized Distributor or Dealer in Your Area Will

- Explain the total Farm For Profit program to you
- Explain the best fertilizer program for your operation
- Suggest ways to improve the efficiency of your chemical program
- Explain to you what other farmers have been doing to cut their operating expenses while maintaining or increasing their production output
